Meagre Radio Report

Joseph Land

ROME, June 8.—All Italy rejoiced today over the official communique issued by the Italia relief committee which stated that radio communication between the missing dirigible and the Citta Di Milano at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, had been re-established.

The relief committee announced that the supply ship had picked up faint, almost indecipherable messages from General Umberto Nobile, which indicated the Italia had come down on Franz Joseph Land. Despite the faintness of the messages, the radio operator of the Citta Di Milano believed they were authentic.

The signals were received at 11:07 last night. The operator was able to decipher only one word—"Franz"—which led to the belief that the Italia was down on Franz Joseph Land.

The Citta Di Milano is now calling Nobile on a wavelength of 33 meters every fifteen minutes, advised from King's Bay station.

All routine and press matter which ordinarily is sent by radio has been reduced to a minimum in order to keep the air clear and facilitate the picking up of any other messages Nobile might send out.

KING'S BAY, Spitzbergen, June 8.—The sealer Hobby, now searching the ice-floes to the northward for traces of the missing dirigible Italia, was today endeavoring to pick up further messages which would confirm those received by the Citta Di Milano yesterday and believed to have been from General Umberto Nobile.

The Hobby is equipped with an Italian naval wireless set having a short wave length. Some doubt is now felt as to whether the signals received by the Citta Di Milano came from the Italia. They were not signed by Nobile, nor was anything else deciphered to definitely confirm that they came directly from him.

Lieut. Lutzu Holm has been unable to take off in his seaplane on a second reconnoitering trip from the Hobby because of overhanging fogs. The ice-boat Braganza is now anchored outside Lomme Bay, hemmed in by ice-floes.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Speeding across the country in attempt to set a new speed record for the 2600 miles between California and New York, the plane "Yankee Doodle" was to land at Curtiss Field today.

The ship, a Lockheed Vega, with a speed of 160 miles an hour, hopped off from San Diego and expected to cross the continent in less than twenty hours. The present record of twenty-six hours was established several years ago by Lieutenants Kelly and McCready, flying east to west.

Lee Schaefer is piloting the record-seeking plane. With him is Harry Tucker, owner of the plane and a wealthy sportsman.

HOSPITAL PATIENT SCALDED; IS DEAD

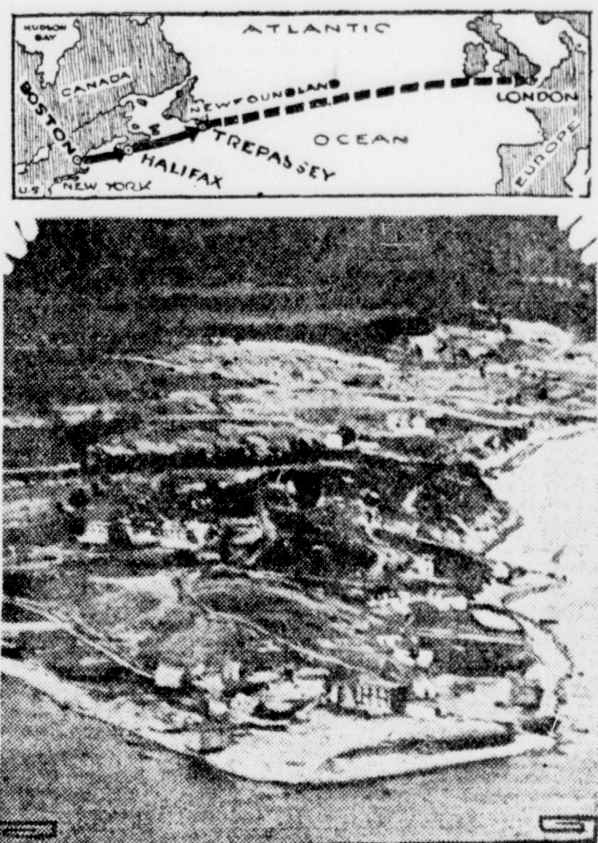

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—The death of Miss Josephine Crow, 47, patient at the Columbus State Hospital, which occurred late yesterday, was hastened but not caused by accidental scalding, hospital authorities said today.

Death, according to physicians, was due to heart trouble. Miss Crow suffered slight scalds when she was left in a bath tub when a nurse left to get towels. When she returned Miss Crow was found slightly burned. The body was taken to Marion late yesterday for burial and funeral services.

DEAF WILL MEET

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Several hundred deaf mutes of Ohio are expected here Sept. 1, 2 and 3 for the annual session of the Pratts, subsidiary of the national fraternal society of the deaf, it was announced today. The meeting here will be held under the auspices of Columbus chapter No. 18.

Ready For Their Trans-Atlantic Flight

In the little harbor of Trepassy, Newfoundland, Amelia Earhart, Boston's "Lady Lindy," Wilmer Stultz, crack big ship pilot, and Lou Gordon, mechanic, are poised to hop off in their tri-motored plane Friendship for a trans-Atlantic crossing to England. Here are Stultz

OIL TANK LEAK AGAIN HOLDS UP AMELIA EARHART OCEAN FLIGHT

TREPASSY BAY, NEWFOUNDLAND, June 8.—A leak in the oil tank of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship made it uncertain today when the plane, carrying Miss Amelia Earhart, and two male companions, could hop off for Europe.

In order to make the necessary repairs Pilot Wilmer Stultz and Mechanic Louis Gordon had to remove the oil tank entirely from the machine.

STOCKHOLDERS BLOCKED IN CITIES MORTGAGE CO. SUIT

Attempted To Collect Money Paid For Stock In Defunct Concern; Receivers Asks Return
Of Dividends

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—The four members of the Oppenheim family, who recently instituted court proceedings against John A. Kelly, receiver of the defunct Cities Mortgage company seeking to collect about $80,000 that they charge they hold in stock of the defunct company, cannot sue its receiver without first presenting their claims for money they alleged they invested in stock of the company after fraudulent representations.

This was the ruling handed down by Judge Charles M. Rogers on record in Common Pleas Court here today.

Judge Rogers' ruling effectively blocks the Oppenheims from bringing further suit against Kelly until they can present valid claims that they paid $80,000 for stock in the company under fraudulent representations.

The suit against Kelly, as the receiver of the defunct company, was filed in Common Pleas Court recently by Justin H. Oppenheim, Theodore Oppenheim, B. C. Oppenheim, and Emma B. Oppenheim, all of Coldwater, Mercer County, Ohio. The four plaintiffs sought to collect $80,000 that they allege they paid out for stock in the company.

Meanwhile, a suit filed by Kelly against the four Oppenheims is still pending in court. Kelly, May 5, filed an answer in cross petition of the original suit, seeking return to the assets of the mortgage company over $5,000 which he alleges were paid illegally as dividends to the Oppenheims.

More than 2,000 people in various parts of Ohio were affected when the company went bankrupt.

These events follow receivership proceedings instituted Jan. 24, by A. A. Echmann, of Marietta, as administrator of the estate of Louisa Cooley, one of the stockholders.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 8.—In his annual statement dealing with the financial condition of the state, Governor Al Smith today served notice on his Republican opponents that he was prepared to defend his administration of state finances at any time and at any place.

The governor's statement reveals that the total cost of New York's government for the next fiscal year will be $232,643,000, an increase of $16,938,000 over the last fiscal year.

Despite this increase, the governor pointed out the state will have a free cash surplus on July 1, 1929 of $13,505,000.

Apparently the governor has visions that the Republicans, in the next state campaign, will attack his administration of state's finances, for he wrote:

"The open season for wild and exaggerated statements about the ability of the legislature to curb the governor's spending proclivities is approaching and in the campaign credit for great economy will be sought in speech and written statements, all of which will undoubtedly be distorted in an attempt to make the facts fit the speech."

THOUSAND FARMERS TO VISIT COLUMBUS TO DEDICATE HOME

Arrange Program For Exercises at Farm
Building

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—More than a thousand farmers from over the state of Ohio will visit Columbus next Tuesday for the dedication of the new farm building, according to an announcement by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation here today.

The dedication program will open at 11 o'clock in the morning, following a concert by the Dublin, Ohio, Band. The program will be presided over by L. B. Palmer, president of the federation, William O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University, will give the invocation.

The new building will be formally turned over to service in development of Ohio agriculture by Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the organization.

Greelings and talks will also be given by M. L. Moon, of the Michigan Farm Bureau; Mrs. C. W. Selet, of the American federation; L. J. Taber, of the national Grange; Dean Alfred Vivian, of Ohio State University; H. A. Cation, of the state Grange, and Mayor James J. Thomas, of Columbus. Governor Donahey has also been asked to attend and talk to the farmers.

The eight living members of the first board of directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau will be present. The afternoon will be taken up with inspection of the new building, and informal discussions of farm bureau work.

PHYSICIAN HELD ON NARCOTIC CHARGE

TOLEDO, O., June 8.—Dr. R. W. Van Horn, Findlay, was at liberty under $2,000 bond today, following his arraignment on an indictment charging violation of the Harrison drug act, in Federal Court here late yesterday. The indictment included five counts, which specified falsifying dispensing records, and failing to keep an account of morphine distribution.

Other things, too, engrossed the attention of the overseer of Zion. He issued a broadcast against nicotine and the devastating influences of tobacco, expressed horror that the boat upon which he returned from Europe had an open bar at which liquor was served, and finally placed a mental taboo upon dancing.

"Dancing," said Voliva, "is all right between two women and two men or even a man and his wife, but the promiscuous dancing of boys and girls who scarcely know one another is wrong."

CHICAGO, June 8.—The planes Southern Cross and Friendship, and the plane of Mabel Boll, too, had better look out.

They're going to hop right off the edge of this world and fall somewhere—somewhere that has not quite been made clear by Wilbur Glenn Voliva, who guides the religious destinies of Zion City, Ill.

Mr. Voliva returned to Chicago and Zion City today following a tour of Europe and the Holy Land. He is convinced, he says, that the earth is flat and that by "travelling around the world" one is merely going around the rim of a saucer.

Voliva, in his tours, however, failed to fall off the edge. He expressed fear that modern aviators will go too far and will "fall off."

HOOVER FOES UNITED

COALITION FORMED TO KEEP CANDIDATE FROM NOMINATION

"Anybody But Hoover"
Slogan Of Other
Candidates

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8.—"Anybody But Hoover"—anything to stop Hoover.

Under this banner the hardpressed anti-Hoover allies massed their forces today for a gigantic effort to prevent the nomination of the cabinet candidate here next week.

The ways and means of accomplishing their objective remain to be determined.

It is admittedly not an encouraging outlook from the coalition's point of view. But Lowden men, Dawes men, Watson men, Curtis men, Coolidge-or-bust men, Goff men—everyone, in fact, who regards the nomination of Herbert Hoover with gloom and foreboding—are part and parcel of the movement.

It would perhaps be too much to say that the allies have perfected an organization. They have met and conferred, not once but many times, and they have agreed upon spokesmen to represent each individual candidate. Louis L. Emerson will speak for Lowden, Henry W. Marshall represents Watson, Albert Newman will look after the interests of Senator Curtis, Wm. H. Miller of Ohio, represents the anti-Hoover element in that state which is favorable to Dawes. These men will be floor lieutenants in the convention, but their principals, that is, the candidates themselves, will constitute the board of strategy behind the scenes.

Theirs will be the task of de-

TRUAX ATTACKING FARM RELIEF VETO

VAN WERT, O., June 8.—The people and farmers of Van Wert County who last night attended the Democratic meeting of the county here, were today still discussing the speech of Director of Agriculture Charles V. Truax, in which the director of the state agriculture department scored the Coolidge administration and especially the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

The second veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill by President Coolidge, which the floor of the convention, one plank, virtually repeating the generalities contained in the 1924 platform, were being written by Senator Smoot (R) of Utah, prospective chairman of the committee. This will be the administration plank, endorsing, in effect, the president's veto of the McNary-Haugen measure.

A second plank, pledging the Republican party to the enactment of a farm bill, containing the equalization of farm products.

GOVERNOR DONAHEY PROCLAIMS FLAG DAY

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—"Let us unite in celebrating Old Glory's birthday by displaying it in every public place and by revering it more than ever," declared Governor Donahey, in a proclamation, designating Thursday, June 14, as Flag Day.

Pointing out that "the standard bearer of American freedom and independence" will be 150 years old on June 14, the governor asked that the occasion be observed throughout Ohio.

"Ohio's manhood and womanhood have been freely given to help perpetuate it and we, the beneficiaries of these services, should all join in honoring it," said Donahey.

Now everybody knows what James Whitcomb Riley meant when he wrote "knee deep in June."

When you are "knee deep in June" this year you are all wet from the knees down since being "knee deep in June" is just the same as being knee deep in Shawnee Creek, if that's possible.

The bard once wrote "what is so rare as a day in June?" If "rare" means what we think it does and has no connection with the condition of a restaurant steak, then the modern version should be "what is so rare as a dry day in June."

June, which used to be a month of sunshine and roses, has deteriorated into a month of Saturday nights and no towels. Once a month of weddings, it has now become a month of wettings. Xenians, under the duress of eternal dampness, are developing flins and gasping for breath. Another week of it and we'll all be swimming around in a bowl with "14 karat" stamped on our flins.

MABEL BOLL FORCED BACK BUT WILL TRY AGAIN ON SATURDAY

NEW YORK, June 8.—Undismayed by the failure of her first attempt to fly the Atlantic, Mabel Boll, "The Queen of Diamonds" expects to take off tomorrow morning for Old Orchard, Me., on the first leg of her oceanic hop. The plane was forced back here yesterday by fog off the Maine coast.

Told that Amelia Earhart, who plans to take off from Trepassy Bay, Newfoundland, in her huge Fokker seaplane, also had been delayed and probably would not be able to make a start before tomorrow, Miss Boll said:

"Of course I do not wish her bad luck, but I am glad that I am to have another opportunity to be the first woman to cross the Atlantic in a plane."

Miss Boll said that she would go to Roosevelt Field this afternoon to inspect her plane, the single motored Bollaqua, Columbia, in which Charles Levine and Clarence Chamberlin hopped to Germany and which Levine has turned over to her for the flight.

KANSAS CITY, June 8.—A farm revolt, as widespread as the famous "16 to 1" and populist movements of other days, was being organized here today to force the writing of a McNary-Haugen farm relief plank into the new Republican platform.

The drive, supported by every announced candidate for the Republican nomination, excepting Herbert Hoover, assumed serious proportions when farm leaders declared an army of 100,000 farmers would march upon the convention to battle for the plank. The slogan already adopted, is: "Equality for Agriculture."

The Hoover managers, sensing the farm movement as a direct attack on their candidate, denounced the agrarian demands of a "defeatist move" against the secretary of commerce. They declared the floor of the convention could not accept a McNary-Haugen plank without "slapping President Coolidge," due to his veto of the bill two weeks ago.

The farm leaders, however, faced the future with optimism. They were cheered by the statement of Nicholas Murray Butler, of New York, that the Republican party would be guilty of a "political blunder" if it failed to heed the demand for an adequate farm relief plank. A similar endorsement of their movement by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, of Illinois, also served to strengthen their battle lines.

Three farm planks were being drafted for submission to the ultimate battle will be fought on the floor of the convention. One plank, virtually repeating the generalities contained in the 1924 platform, were being written by Senator Smoot (R) of Utah, prospective chairman of the committee. This will be the administration plank, endorsing, in effect, the president's veto of the McNary-Haugen measure.

A second plank, pledging the Republican party to the enactment of a farm bill, containing the equalization of farm products.

LEJUENE MAY SPEAK AT LEGION MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Plans are under way today for the annual state convention of the American Legion to be held here Aug. 20 and 21. Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commanding officer of the U. S. Marines, has accepted tentatively an invitation to address the meeting.

Gen. Lejeune will come here unless duties require him to be out of the country, the committee of chairman announced yesterday. Another international figure who will attend the meeting is Paul V. Claudel, French ambassador to the United States.

TOKIO, June 8.—An attempt to assassinate Baron Tanaka, the Japanese premier, at the railway station here was frustrated today by the timely intervention of the police.

PLOTS FRUSTRATED

When it does appear it is so damp and warped that the rays shine backward. It looks like the same old sun but it doesn't act the same.

A move to change the calendar appeared the most practical among suggestions of what to do about the weather Friday. The proposal would change June to November and move all the other months forward one month in their proper order. Thus we would be now having July weather instead of the November weather we are getting. If this be treason to the June brides, make the most of it.

PLANE PASSES MORE THAN HALF MILEAGE TOWARD BRISBANE

"All Well" Say Flyer
Though Fighting
Tropical Storm

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The monoplane Southern Cross was well past the halfway mark in its 1,795 mile dash from Fiji to Brisbane, Australia, early today, according to a radio message picked up by Radio Corporation stations in Honolulu and American naval radio stations in Samoa and Guam, and relayed here.

The message, transmitted from the plane at 1 a. m., Saturday (Fiji time), said: "Position: latitude 23.3 south, longitude 165.22 east. Seven hundred and eighty miles to Brisbane. All well."

Apparently the Southern Cross was steering a true southwesterly course to Brisbane and averaging a speed of approximately 100 miles an hour.

SUVA, Fiji Islands, June 9.—Stubbornly fighting the menace of a tropical storm, the giant monoplane Southern Cross was steadily pushing its blue nose onward over the South Pacific today.

The giant tri-motor Fokker hopped off late yesterday from Nasesel Beach, near here, on the third leg of the 7,500-mile flight from Oakland, Calif., to Sydney, Australia. More than 5,500 miles of the dangerous cruise was accomplished in two hops, terminating here.

Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, commander of the expedition, was at the controls when the huge monoplane boomed down the white stretch of Nasesel Beach, and soared gracefully out to sea. In the cabin with him were C. T. P. Unwin, Australian co-pilot; James Warner, radio operator, and Harry Lyon, navigator, the latter two Americans.

The plane circled Suva one time as a gesture of farewell and headed straight for the southwest. In three minutes it was lost to view. Practically every white person on the islands, together with thousands of gibbering dusky natives were on hand to wave "bon voyage."

Almost immediately, Radioman Warner unwound the craft's antennae and began tapping the key which will keep the world informed of the latest episode in the greatest air adventure yet attempted. Through the evening hours and far into the night, the faithful radio kept flashing its messages of cheer.

After they had been out four hours, during which time Warner had sent several jocular messages, Co-Pilot Unwin sent this one, addressed to "QST":

"Smithy. Just remarked 'Bon Voyage' is really remarkable how one's air mind expands. A few years ago a 1,700-mile flight over water was enormous. Now it is the shortest of our three hops. Please thank all who sent cables of congratulations to us at Honolulu and Suva. Impossible to reply individually. Cheers."

If the flyers are able to maintain their nineties per hour average established over the first 550 miles, they should negotiate the present hop in twenty hours, arriving at Brisbane shortly before noon, Suva time.

At Brisbane the two Americans are scheduled to leave the expedition and the Australians will proceed alone over the intervening course of 500 miles to Sydney. The Americans had been engaged to fly only as far as Suva, but upon reaching there Commander Kingford-Smith was so impressed with their services that he invited them to "honor the expedition" as far as Brisbane.

During the two hours of the night when heavy rains fell in the path of the speeding monoplane when ominous clouds obstructed vision and when the outlook was blackest, the crew of the sturdy plane repeated the radio message: "All well" to an anxious world. Pleading to arouse apprehension in the minds of those who watch their progress throughout the night, they allowed no inkling of their ordeal to escape through their wireless, conveying only words of cheer, when their hopes were at the lowest level in the midst of a grim battle against the danger of a south sea storm.

Fears were stirred more than a hour later, when a message was intercepted which had been transmitted to the plane from a station in Sydney, Australia and contained a forecast of weather along the path still stretching ahead of the Southern Cross.

CHILD KILLED

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 8.—Ruth Casey, five, was dead today of a broken neck, sustained when the automobile in which she was riding with her mother, Mrs. W. H. Casey, of Bellefontaine, was hit by a truck and hurled into a field here last night.

Mrs. Casey was only slightly hurt.

TREPASSY, N.S., NEWFOUNDLAND, June 8.—A leak in the oil tank of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship made it uncertain today when the plane, carrying Miss Amelia Earhart, and two male companions, could hop off for Europe.

In order to make the necessary repairs Pilot Wilmer Stultz and Mechanic Louis Gordon had to remove the oil tank entirely from the plane.

At 11 a. m. there was a gusty wind blowing and the repair work was still under way. Miss Earhart said that they would take the air at the very first opportunity but would not run the risk of trying the jump to Europe unless every part of the mechanism was in perfect working order.

The dedication program will open at 11 o'clock in the morning, following a concert by the Tabula, Ohio, Band. The program will be presided over by L. B. Palmer, president of the federation, William O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University, will give the invocation.

The new building will be formally turned over to service by the Ohio Farm Bureau, executive secretary of the organization.

More than 2,000 people in various parts of Ohio were affected when the company went bankrupt.

These events follow receivership proceedings instituted Jan. 24, by A. A. Echramm, of Marietta, as administrator of the estate of Louisa Cooley, one of the stockholders.

The suit against Kelly, as the receiver of the defunct company, was filed in Common Pleas Court recently by Justin H. Oppenheim, Theodore Oppenheim, B. C. Oppenheim, and Emma B. Oppenheim, all of Coldwater, Mercer County, Ohio. The four plaintiffs sought to collect $80,000 that they allege they paid out for stock in the company.

Meanwhile, a suit filed by Kelly against the four Oppenheims is still pending in court. Kelly, May 5, filed an answer in cross petition of the original suit, seeking return to the assets of the mortgage company over $5,000 which he alleges was paid illegally as dividends to the Oppenheims.

COALITION FORMED TO KEEP CANDIDATE FROM NOMINATION

termining how this "anybody but Hoover" campaign is to be accomplished—at it will.

Thus far there has been little definite decided upon except the city and purpose of goal.

They have agreed:

To carry the delegate contest, involving some sixty-five votes which Hoover won overwhelmingly in the credentials committee and perhaps to the floor of the convention itself.

To button-hole incoming delegates and the like warm one in the Hoover camp for the purpose of converting them.

To pursue diligently and vigorously the defeatist campaign which aims to convince the practical politicians of the party that Hoover cannot be elected against E. A. Smith in November.

But the deep strategy and the higher tactics remain to be determined.

The allies are anxiously awaiting the arrival in Kansas City of Senator Curtis of Kansas. They have talked with Curtis in Washington long distance several times in the last forty-eight hours. Curtis, an astute politician and an adroit general, is said to have informed them that the outlook from the coalition's viewpoint "is not as dark in Washington as it may seem in Kansas City." Just what this imperturbable has not been made clear but it cheered Senator Watson and Mr. E. Lowden, Daves managers.

It might mean, one of the allies' spokesmen said, that Curtis has not yet given up hope that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon may yet be prevailed upon not to throw Pennsylvania's power.

KONJOLA BRINGS NEW FEELINGS OF GLORIOUS HEALTH

This Lady Tells How New Medicine Ended Indigestion And Nervousness

Konjola is known in every section of Xenia as a medicine of real merit in cases of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel disorders and rheumatism and neuritis troubles. This advanced remedy has helped thousands back to health and people in all walks of life have highly indorsed it after being relieved of their suffering. A most remarkable recovery is told in a report just received by the Konjola Man at the Gallaher drug store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting large crowds of people and explaining the merits of Konjola.

Mrs. Mary Murphy, R. R. No. 6, this city, who made the following statement:

"I believe Konjola is the best medicine on the market today to relieve cases of the common ailments," said Mrs. Murphy. "Because it has worked wonders for me by restoring my health when I thought my case was hopeless."

"About three months ago I was taken ill with a serious ailment that was followed by weeks of coughing and a general rundown condition of my health. For days and even weeks at a time I would be so tired and worn-out that I was almost helpless. I could never do my work in the proper manner and felt half-sick all the time. I was subject to dizzy spells which would come over me and at any time. These were so severe that I would have to rest before I could continue my work. Even my nerves were affected and they were totally wrecked. At night I would lie and toss for hours before going to sleep. I hardly knew what it was to get a good night's sleep. These troubles were all partly due to the fact that I was troubled with indigestion. It seemed as though my food did not digest at all. I would simply form in the pit of my stomach and feel like a heavy rock. The terrible pains would stay with me for several hours and I often thought I could not stand the misery any longer."

"It was told of the wonderful results achieved by Konjola and I made up my mind to give it a trial. Today, after finishing several bottles of this medicine I feel years younger than I did before I took this medicine. I can go about my housework and I never tire out like I used to. The dizzy spells that formerly troubled me so much, left me some time ago and have never returned. Konjola has strengthened my nerves and I really get the rest that I need so badly at night. I am never bothered with those indigestion spells as I used to be and I can eat anything that I want without suffering the least bit afterward. In fact, my health has improved in every way and I am always well with energy and vigor. Konjola has proved to be the most effective medicine that I have ever taken or heard of. I think that it is far in advance of anything else and I shall always strongly indorse it to others."

erful delegation of seventy-nine votes to Hoover. It might mean, another ventured, that Curtis, who has been rather mysteriously remaining behind in Washington, has had some cheering word to the effect that "I don't choose" does not necessarily mean "I won't."

Whatever it meant probably will be made apparent within the next few days, for Curtis is due to arrive late tomorrow or Sunday to join his fellow allies in the grand offensive against Hoover.

The coalition met again today for further discussion, just as they met yesterday and will meet every day until the end. The conferring is continuous and unending.

Meanwhile, the Hoover people are not idle. They, too, have been meeting and will continue to meet. They believe they have enough votes now to insure the nomination of their candidate within three ballots. Their principal job, they believe, is to hold the lines fast, and they are supremely confident of their ability to do so.

There are about as many practical politicians and convention strategists in the Hoover camp as there are in the allies' lineup—men like Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, Senator Simpson of Ohio, C. Bascom Sloop of Virginia, Ralph Williams, of Oregon, vice chairman of the Republican national committee; James W. Good of Iowa, Ex-Gov. James W. Good of Iowa, Ex-Gov. a number of others long skilled in the tactics and strategy of political conventions.

Good, in a statement designed to reassure any wavering ones in the Hoover camp, declared today that the Hoover delegates today number "more than 500 not counting any of Pennsylvania's 79."

"To nominate require 546," continued Good. "The nomination of Mr. Hoover is now a foregone conclusion."

"Good Republicans in this hour will not say, or do anything that will impair the party's chances of victory in November."

This last was a thrust at the defeatist talk which the allies have been pursuing so energetically in Kansas City and in Washington the talk that Hoover will lose the disgruntled grain belt in November and that he cannot defeat Al Smith in the East. The Hoover managers are complaining that this is "biting the hand that feeds."

Both sides are shooting out "farm statements" with regularity and precision. The allies issue one statement from a prominent farm organization leader asserting that the Middle West will bolt the ticket in November if Hoover is nominated; the Hoover managers immediately counter with a statement from some other farm leader to the effect that "Hoover is the friend of the farmer and will really do something constructive for agriculture."

James S. Elliott, 87, pioneer Greene Countian and one of the oldest members of the Masonic Order in the state, died at his home, two miles south of Bellbrook, Thursday night.

Mr. Elliott was born and lived all of his life on the farm where he died. He never married and lived during the past few years with his nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Weaver.

He was the son of James and Catherine Silver Elliott, and was born April 13, 1841.

He was prominently identified with the Masonic lodge, being a member of the Scottish Rite, Dayton; the Blue Lodge at Waynesville of which he was the last surviving member and was also affiliated with Xenia chapter, No. 36, Royal Arch Masons and Wright Council, No. 96, Royal and Select Masons, of Xenia.

Funeral services will be held at the home, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in charge of the Scottish Rite Lodge of Dayton and the Waynesville Blue Lodge. Burial will be made in Bellbrook Cemetery.

DARING TRANSPACIFIC FLIGHT IN "SOUTHERN CROSS"

Successfully completing the first leg of their transpacific flight attempt, two Australian airmen, Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his relief pilot, Charles T. P. Ulm, accompanied by Lieutenant Harry Lyons, Jr., navigator, and James Warner, radio operator, both Americans, are confident of accomplishing the remainder of their 7,778-mile flight to Australia. Above is a view of the Southern Cross, their Fokker plane, in flight; center, a map of the route across the Pacific, with inset of the flyers; and, below, scenes at Hawaii, the Fiji Islands, and Sydney, Australia, stopping points on the way across.

tion fee, was being drafted by George N. Peek, Illinois economist whose ideas were incorporated into the McNary-Haugen bill. Governor Adam McMullen, of Nebraska will collaborate with Peek when he reaches Kansas City. The third was prepared by heads of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Chicago, along the same lines.

The farm move leaders, aided by supporters of former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, and Senator Guy P. Goff, of West Virginia, already have agreed upon their course of action. Their first efforts will be concentrated on gaining control of the resolutions committee. If successful they will write their plank into platform and then fight to keep it there. Falling in this, the farm leaders will go into the convention and seek to have their plank inserted by a vote of the delegates.

The farmer's invasion of Kansas City, headed by Governor McMullen, of Nebraska, probably will begin tomorrow.

Hundreds of Kansas and Missouri farmers will drift into the city over the week end, they added, while other motor caravans are expected Monday as far west as Colorado and as far east as Ohio. Five car-loads of Indiana farmers, it was said, will reach here Monday by special train.

YOUTH KILLED BY SHOTGUN ACCIDENT

BUCCYRUS, O., June 8.—Robert Elliland, 15, died in Monett Hospital here this morning from gunshot wounds received accidentally late yesterday afternoon.

The youth, accompanied by another lad, Robert Hosterman, 15, had started to a woods near here to shoot crows. Both boys carried shotguns and were riding bicycles.

According to reports of the accident, Hosterman fell from his wheel and his gun was discharged the shot tearing away part of Elliland's face.

Elliland was rushed to the hospital here and died at 4:30 this morning.

PLANES WILL SEEK NOBILE DIRIGIBLE

LENINGRAD, Soviet Russia, June 8.—Three seaplanes, carrying five flyers, hopped off today for Archangel on the first leg of four separate flights to Franz Josef Land in search of the missing polar expedition headed by Gen. Umberto Nobile.

The flights to Franz Joseph Land will not be commenced, however, until the ice breaker Malign has established a mobile base off Nova Zembla Land.

COALITION FORMED TO KEEP CANDIDATE FROM NOMINATION

termining how this "anybody but Hoover" anything to stop Hoover with plan is to be accomplished—if at all.

Thus far there has been little definitely decided upon except the unity and purpose of goal.

They have agreed:

To carry the delegate contest, involving some sixty-five votes which Hoover won overwhelmingly, to the credentials committee and perhaps to the floor of the convention itself.

To bring in the incoming delegates and the late warm one in the Hoover camp for the purpose of convincing them.

To pursue diligently and vigorously the defeatist campaign which aims to convince the practical politicians of the party that Hoover cannot be elected against Al Smith in November.

But the deep strategy and the finer tactics remain to be determined.

The allies are anxiously awaiting the arrival in Kansas City of Senator Curtis of Kansas. They have talked with Curtis in Washington by long distance several times in the last forty-eight hours. Curtis, an astute politician and an adroit general, is said to have informed them that the outlook from the coalition's viewpoint "is not as dark in Washington as it may seem in Kansas City." Just what this intrepids has not been made clear but it cheered Senator Watson and Mr. E. Lowden, Davis managers imitatively.

It might mean, one of the allies' spokesmen said, that Curtis has not yet given up hope that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon may yet be prevailed upon not to throw Pennsylvania's power.

Both sides are shooting out "farm statements" with regularity and precision. The allies issue one statement, the Hoover organization leader asserting that the Middle West will bolt the ticket in November if Hoover is nominated; the Hoover managers immediately counter with a statement from some other farm leader to the effect that "Hoover is the friend of the farmer and will really do something constructive for agriculture."

DARING TRANSPACIFIC FLIGHT IN "SOUTHERN CROSS"

Successfully completing the first leg of their transpacific flight attempt, two Australian airmen, Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his relief pilot, Charles T. P. Um, accompanied by Lieutenant Harry Lyons, Jr., navigator, and James Warner, radio operator, both Americans, are confident of accomplishing the remainder of their 7,778-mile flight to Australia. Above is a view of the Southern Cross, their Fokker plane, in flight; center, a map of the route across the Pacific, with inset of the flyers; and, below, scenes at Hawaii, the Fiji Islands, and Sydney, Australia, stopping points on the way across.

tion fee, was being drafted by George N. Peek, Illinois economist whose ideas were incorporated into the McNary-Haugen bill. Governor Adam McMullen, of Nebraska will collaborate with Peek when he reaches Kansas City. The third was prepared by heads of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Chicago, along the same lines.

The farm move leaders, aided by supporters of former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, and Senator Guy P. Goff, of

West Virginia, already have agreed upon their course of action. Their first efforts will be concentrated on gaining control of the resolution committee. If successful they will write their plank into platform and then fight to keep it there. Failing in this, the farm leaders will go into the convention and seek to have their plank inserted by a vote of the delegates. The farmer's invasion of Kansas

City, headed by Governor McMullen, of Nebraska, probably will begin tomorrow.

Hundreds of Kansas and Missouri farmers will drift into the city over the week end, they added, while other motor caravans are expected Monday as far west as Colorado and as far east as Ohio. Five carloads of Indiana farmers, it was said, will reach here Monday by special train.

PLANS FOR YEAR LAID

BY XENIA COUNCIL, P. T. A.

"Helping Hand to Health and Happiness" is the new slogan of the Xenia Council of P. T. A., adopted by the council at the home of the new president, Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, Thursday afternoon.

Plans were laid at the meeting for the annual one-day drive for $1,000, September 27, for the charity work of the organization. The total amount is used exclusively for furnishing hot, nourishing meals to all under-nourished children in the Xenia City Schools.

Superintendent H. C. Pendry addressed the council and said in part: "The council is worthy of praise in being a 'mother' to children who are unfortunate and through the meals provided by money so generously donated to the P. T. A. These children are better able to cope with the privileged child and are better fitted to do regular school work. A starved child cannot learn. Neither can a child with defective hearing, sight or teeth," he said in suggesting a "round up" and medical examination of children for the early fall.

Mrs. E. P. Hamlin gave a short talk, giving suggestions for the coming year. She appointed a committee to draw up the Constitution and by-laws for the council. The committee includes: Miss Faye Cavanaugh, Mrs. Lee Roy Smith, Mrs. George Baldwin and Mrs. Elmer Yeakley.

The meeting had a full representation of all associations. Mrs. J. Stunt was elected publicity chairman of the council. Other officers are: Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, president; Mrs. C. R. Stearns, vice president; Miss Eleanor Alexander, secretary; Mrs. Lee Fudge treasurer.

BRIDGE AND TEA FOR COUNTRY CLUB GUESTS.

"Guest Day" at the Country Club, Thursday, afforded a delightful party for about eighty women who spent the afternoon at the clubhouse.

The bridge-tea was one of the most charming affairs held at the club, and its success was due to the arrangements made by Mrs. J. A. Chew, Mrs. Charles A. Kelbie, Mrs. E. H. Heathman, Miss Virginia Heathman, Mrs. C. E. Arbogast, Mrs. H. L. Sayre, Mrs. Eber Reynolds and Mrs. P. B. Yockey.

There were several private parties entertained, the hostesses including Mrs. Lawrence Shields, Mrs. Charles A. Kelbie, Mrs. Henry C. Flynn and Mrs. James Wilson.

After cards, tea was served. The clubhouse was fragrant with lovely bouquets of summer bloom.

Hoover's Manager

James W. Good, for many years a member of congress from the Iowa district in which Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover was born, has been placed in charge of Hoover's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. Good is to direct the work of all committees in aiding the Hoover-for-president campaign.

CARL DUERR PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO FALSE PRETENSE CHARGES

Charged with obtaining property under false pretense, Carl Duerr, Dayton, O., pleaded not guilty before R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, Thursday afternoon. He has the option of changing his plea and was placed in the County Jail in default of $1,000 bond.

Duerr was arrested by the Montgomery County sheriff's office on complaint of Sheriff Omer Tate and returned to Xenia by Deputy Sheriff George Sugden Thursday afternoon.

Duerr, it is charged, used a rust to obtain possession of a Marmion roadster from a local garage last August, after it had been placed in storage following its confiscation in a raid by the sheriff and deputies on a liquor cache in Bath, Twp.

The machine was removed from the garage the following day by Duerr. It is alleged, when he represented himself as having been authorized to take charge of it for the real owner.

After an investigation of several months, Sheriff Tate located the car in the garage of a Dayton woman and brought it back to Xenia. It was later brought out the woman had purchased the car unaware that it had been stolen and it was then turned back to her on a replevin action.

Ray Wentz, Dayton, alleged to be the owner of the roadster, escaped from officers on the night of the raid, but is now confined in the County Jail here. He was received several weeks ago from Dayton to serve a sentence on a federal bootlegging charge.

Claiming the roadster was being driven by Wentz with license plates issued to him for a Chrysler sedan, Sheriff Tate filed charges against Wentz and Duerr Thursday of driving an auto bearing license tags issued for another machine.

Arraigned before Judge S. C. Wright in Probate Court, both men pleaded not guilty Thursday afternoon.

OLD PENNSY SUPPLY HOUSE BEING RAZED FOLLOWING ITS SALE

Work of razing the old railroad supply house opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. depot, which has virtually been completed, removes a landmark from the railroad yards here.

The old building, a frame structure, which has not been used for the last year, was purchased recently by T. J. Canning, this city, well-known railroad engineer.

Mr. Canning is having the structure torn down and will use part of the material in the construction of a summer cottage which is being built by him and his brothers, Joseph and Timothy Canning, along the Little Miami River near Goetz.

The structure was erected in 1866 by Michael Barry. The original owner was a man named Corry, who at one time was proprietor of the depot restaurant. He used it as a rooming house in conjunction with the railroad and station hotel, and rooms were furnished to all officials of the Cincinnati Division.

Office space was located in the building were those of Harper Kepler, supervisor of supplies for the Cincinnati Division; S. W. Guyton, master carpenter; Charles Suesse, supervisor of telegraph and signals, and George Bussmyer, lieutenant of railroad police.

Afterward it was converted into railroad offices. Recently, when these offices were removed to the second floor of the station above the depot restaurant, the railroad decided to abandon the structure.

Wives of members who accompanied their husbands to the meeting were guests of Mrs. Sayre at the "guest day" bridge party at the clubhouse.

Members also enjoyed a 6 o'clock dinner served by Jacob Kany at the Elks' Club at which wives of the visitors were guests.

Business problems of mutual interest were discussed at the business meeting of the convention which followed the dinner.

Members of the club were present from Troy, Piqua, Lebanon, Urbana, Dayton, Miamisburg, Cedarville and Franklin.

SUPERINTENDENT NAMED FOR OSBORN SCHOOL BY BOARD

R. J. Warner, Rome, O., near Columbus, has accepted the superintendency of the Bath Twp. Consolidated School, it was announced Friday. He was employed by the board of education at a yearly salary of $2,500.

Arnold Drewes, principal of the Osborn School was offered the position of superintendent, at the same salary, but declined to accept the superintendency of the New Boston, O. School, at $32,000 a year. Mr. Warner will succeed H. E. Zuber, who resigned to take a similar office at Nelsonville, O.

Stops have been taken by Superintendent Zuber to make Osborn an exempted school district, but it is not certain whether Superintendent Warner will want to continue this plan, which takes Osborn out of the county school supervision.

Mr. Warner has been teaching at Junction City, O., but lives at Rome, O.

Mr. Drewes has been with the Greene County Schools five years, and was principal at Osborn one year. He was formerly superintendent of the Spring Valley Schools.

County authorities believe they are in possession of a clew which may lead to establishing the identity of thieves who perpetrated a robbery at the home of Lester Harner, Fairfield Pike, Memorial Day.

The clew is thought to have been furnished by the passing of a forged check for $50, written on a check book of a local bank, belonging to Harner which was a part of the loot obtained by the thieves.

The forged check, made payable to "Edward Johnson" and signed with the forged name of Lester Harner, was cashed by the Mad River National Bank, Springfield, presumably by the burglar who stole the check book.

Sheriff Omer Tate and O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman, are investigating that phase of the case.

Levi Drake, Home Ave., arrested at 6 p. m. Thursday by Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, following an auto collision at Church and Galloway Sts., may be charged with operating an auto while intoxicated.

He is being held at Police Headquarters but has not been arraigned.

It is charged Drake's car collided with an auto driven by L. Purdom, Fairground Road. Both machines were damaged but the occupants escaped injury.

PLANS FOR YEAR LAID BY XENIA COUNCIL P. T. A.

"A Helping Hand for Health and Happiness" is the new slogan of the Xenia Council of P. T. A., adopted by the council at the home of the new president, Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, Thursday afternoon. Plans were laid at the meeting for the annual one-day drive for $1,000, September 27, for the charity work of the organization. The total amount is used exclusively for furnishing hot, nourishing meals to all under-nourished children in the Xenia City Schools.

Superintendent H. C. Pendry addressed the council and said in part: "The council is worthy of praise in being a 'mother' to children who are unfortunate and through the meals provided by money so generously donated to the P. T. A. These children are better able to cope with the privileged child and are better fitted to do regular school work. A starved child cannot learn. Neither can a child with defective hearing, sight or teeth," he said in suggesting a "round up" and medical examination of children for the early fall.

Mrs. E. P. Hamlin gave a short talk, giving suggestions for the coming year. She appointed a committee to draw up the Constitution and by-laws for the council. The committee includes: Miss Faye Cavanaugh, Mrs. Lee Roy Smith, Mrs. George Baldwin and Mrs. Elmer Yeakley.

The meeting had a full representation of all associations. Mrs. J. J. Stout was elected publicity chairman of the council. Other officers are: Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, president; Mrs. C. R. Stearns, vice president; Miss Eleanor Alexander, secretary; Mrs. Lee Fudge treasurer.

BRIDGE AND TEA FOR COUNTRY CLUB GUESTS.

"Guest Day" at the Country Club, Thursday, afforded a delightful party for about eighty women who spent the afternoon at the clubhouse.

The bridge-tea was one of the most charming affairs held at the club, and its success was due to the arrangements made by Mrs. J. A. Chew, Mrs. Charles A. Kelbie, Mrs. E. H. Heathman, Miss Virginia Heathman, Mrs. C. E. Lewis, Mrs. H. L. Sayre, Mrs. Eber Reynolds and Mrs. P. B. Yockey.

There were several private parties entertained, the hostesses including Mrs. Lawrence Shields, Mrs. Charles A. Kelbie, Mrs. Henry C. Flynn and Mrs. James Wilson III.

After cards, tea was served. The clubhouse was fragrant with lovely bouquets of summer bloom.

ATTEND WEDDING IN WASHINGTON, C. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Ancil W. Wright, Cedarville, attended the wedding of Mrs. Wright's sister, Miss Celia Thomas to Dr. James Mercer Harsha, at Washington, C. H., Wednesday.

The bride has a number of friends in this city who are interested in her marriage. Mrs. Wright officiated as matron of honor. A reception and wedding supper followed the ceremony. Dr. and Mrs. Harsha will reside in Washington, C. H.

XENIA COUPLE IS MARRIED AT PARSONAGE.

The marriage of Mr. Jesse Sanders and Miss Bernice Gile was solemnized at the Friends parsonage Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. The Rev. Russell Burkett read the ceremony.

Immediately after the service, the couple went to their home on the Bellbrook Pike, where about sixty guests were received.

CLUB HOLDS MEETING.

The second meeting of the T. N. T. Sewing Club, Clifton, was held at the home of Miss Betty Tobias, Tuesday, when the club enjoyed a delightful program. Demonstrations were given by various members of the club. All members were present.

Those taking part in the program were: Miss Mae Young, Mrs. Dorothy Eckman, Miss Betty Tobias and Doris Printz.

CARDS AND SOCIAL.

A card party and social will be given by the women of the Altar Society of St. Augustine Church, Jamestown, Tuesday evening, June 12. The affair will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Pitstick. The members are inviting all their friends to attend the party.

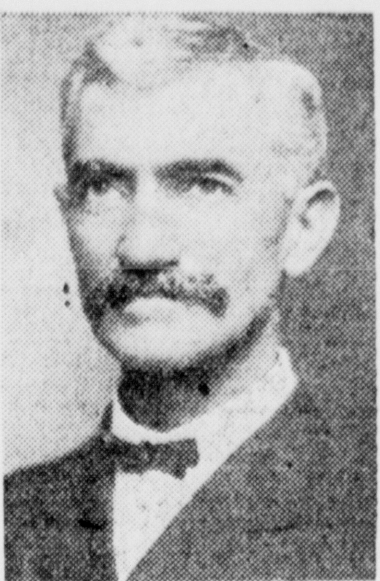

Dr. W. A. Galloway is spending a few days in St. Louis, Mo., on business and will return Saturday.

Friends of Mr. J. F. Harshman may call at the late home, N. King St., after 6 o'clock Friday evening.

Xenia Lodge, No. 49, F. and A. M., will hold an important meeting at the Masonic Temple at 7:30 o'clock Friday night. The entered apprentice degree will be conferred on a class of candidates.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Downes and daughter, Regina, Mr. and Mrs. J. McCabe and daughter, Vera, and Mr. and Mrs. John Cronin, of this city, attended the wedding of Mr. F. Paul Cronin and Miss Estelle Worham, Thursday morning at Holy Trinity Church, Middletown. O. Miss Helen Downes was a member of the bridal party.

TWO HUSBANDS SEEK DIVORCES IN XENIA; OTHER COURT NEWS

That his wife has several times threatened and attempted to cut him with a butcher knife is the complaint made to support a charge of extreme cruelty in a divorce suit filed by Arthur Starlie against Ida Starlie in Common Pleas Court.

The plaintiff also sets forth grounds of gross neglect of duty. They were married in 1913. No children were born of the union. Suit for divorce on grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years has also been filed by James R. Hawkins against Perenne Hawkins, 915 38th St., Oakland, Calif.

No children were born of the marriage. The plaintiff seeks to have his wife barred of dower in property owned by him at 650 E. Church St.

NOTE SUIT FILED

Suit for $350, alleged due on a promissory note, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Charles Addison, Albert and Nathan Bozarth against O. L. and Blanche Smith.

The Exchange Bank and The Abel Magnesia Co. are named co-defendants. The plaintiffs claim the defendants own stock in bank and in the company, and seek a temporary restraining order, preventing a transfer of stock. F. L. Johnson is attorney for the plaintiffs.

EXCEPTIONS HEARD

Exceptions filed to the final account of William H. Miller, administrator of the estate of Sarah E. Miller, deceased, were heard in Probate Court Friday.

The court overruled items 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 8 of the exceptions but sustained item 7. Finding that the cancellation of the note of Frank Miller, as set forth in item 3, was improper, the court ordered the administrator to collect five-twelfths of $160, the rental consideration, $66.67, with $5 interest, a total of $71.67, and distribute the amount.

The administrator was also ordered to file a supplementary account within ten days.

MUSCLE SHOALS IS PERMITTED TO DIE

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Congress will reconvene next December with the Muscle Shoals problem still on its docket.

Coolidge allowed the bill, which would have started the huge power and nitrate project in operation, to die by pocket veto. As the measure was permitted to lie on his desk for the required ten days with no action whatsoever, the specific objection the president had to it can not be stated officially. He has consistently been opposed to the injection of government into business, however, and that probably was his principal disagreement with the bill. Likewise, it is understood he was swayed by the vigorous objections of the Tennessee delegation to the building of a dam at Cove Creek, Tenn.

CARL DUERR PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO FALSE PRETENSE CHARGES

Charged with obtaining property under false pretense, Carl Duerr, Dayton, O., pleaded not guilty before R. O. Copsey, justice of the peace, Thursday afternoon. He has the option of changing his plea and was placed in the County Jail in default of $1,000 bond.

Duerr was arrested by the Montgomery County sheriff's office on complaint of Sheriff Ohmer Tate and returned to Xenia by Deputy Sheriff George Sugden Thursday afternoon.

Duerr, it is charged, used a rust to obtain possession of a Marmon roadster from a local garage last August, after it had been placed in storage following its confiscation in a raid by the sheriff and deputies on a liquor cache in Bath, Twp.

The machine was removed from the garage the following day by Duerr. It is alleged, when he represented himself as having been authorized to take charge of it for the real owner.

After an investigation of several months, Sheriff Tate located the car in the garage of a Dayton woman and brought it back to Xenia. It was later brought out that the woman had purchased the car unaware that it had been stolen and it was then turned back to her.

TWENTY DEALERS IN REXALL PRODUCTS AT XENIA MEETING

Twenty members of the Miami Valley Rexall Club attended the June meeting of the organization in Xenia Thursday.

H. L. Sayre, Xenia Rexall drug-gist, was host to club members.

The club's next meeting will not be held until September as meetings are dispensed with during July and August every year.

The club held its annual golf tournament at the Xenia Country Club in the afternoon to decide the club's champion golfer.

H. L. Sayre won the championship for the second time in the last three years with a low card of eighty-eight for eighteen holes, and was awarded a loving cup. Charles Moore finished second with a score of eighty-nine.

Sayre won the trophy for the first time at Troy three years ago and finished runnerup last year at Eaton.

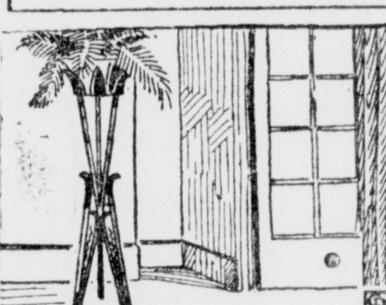

Wives of members who accompanied their husbands to the meeting were guests of Mrs. Sayre at the "guest day" bridge party at the clubhouse.

Members also enjoyed a 6 o'clock dinner served by Jacob Kany at the Elks' Club at which wives of the visitors were guests.

Business problems of mutual interest were discussed at the business meeting of the convention which followed the dinner.

Members of the club were present from Troy, Piqua, Lebanon, Urbana, Dayton, Miamisburg, Cedarville and Franklin.

R. J. Warner, Rome, O., near Columbus, has accepted the superintendency of the Bath Twp. Consolidated School. It was announced Friday. He was employed by the board of education at a yearly salary of $2,800.

Arnold Drewes, principal of the Osborn School was offered the position of superintendent, at the same salary, but declined to accept the superintendency of the Bath Twp. Consolidated School. He was announced Friday. He was employed by the board of education at a yearly salary of $2,800.

Mr. Warner has been with the Greene County Schools five years, and was principal at Osborn one year. He was formerly superintendent of the Spring Valley Schools.

Work of razing the old railroad supply house opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. depot, which has virtually been completed, removes a landmark from the railroad yards here.

The old building, a frame structure, which has not been used for the last year, was purchased recently by T. Canning, this city, well-known railroad engineer.

Mr. Canning is having the structure torn down and will use part of the material in the construction of a summer cottage which is being built by him and his brothers, Joseph and Timothy Canning, along the Little Miami River near Goes.

The structure was erected in 1866 by Michael Berry. The original owner was a man named Corry, who at one time was proprietor of the depot restaurant. He used it as a rooming house in conjunction with the railroad and station hotels, and rooms were furnished to all officials of the Cincinnati Division of the road, all of whom were formerly located in Xenia.

It consists of two stories in front and three at the rear with a basement. Later it was purchased by the railroad and used for a supply house, the supply clerk having an office in it.

Afterward it was converted into railroad offices. Recently, when these offices were removed to the second floor of the station above the depot restaurant, the railroad decided to abandon the structure.

Offices which were located in the building were those of Harper Kepler, supervisor of supplies for the Cincinnati Division; S. W. Guyton, master carpenter; Charles Suesse, supervisor of telegraph and signals, and George Bussemer, lieutenant of railroad police.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A LASTING INHERITANCE—A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children; and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.—Prov. 13:22.

TELLING A GREAT STORY

The story of how man has journeyed through the wilderness of this world, from the primeval forest to a modern civilization, is probably the most interesting narrative that ever will be written. Man will ever be having a try at it to the end of time. He has been trying to tell the story since man first invented language. Every age tells this story in its own terms, in the terms of its own understanding; and never before in the world has this old story been told with such interest, such accuracy and such stirring dramatics as it is being told now.

One of the best stories written in our times is called "The Stream of History." It is written by Geoffrey Parsons and published by Charles Scribner & Sons, New York; a five-dollar book and well worth it. Geoffrey Parsons, who is one of the editors of The New York Tribune, brings to this work the talent of an interesting writer, the mind of an intelligent scholar who has selected his facts with unusual skill and best of all the perspective of a sophisticated modern. He has written this story, beginning, of course, with the impulse that was man before man was; devoting a chapter to the mystery of life and to the growth of the life spirit from the amoeba to man; sketching our primitive ancestors quickly and with understanding. He comes out of the old age into the new, where herdsmen and farmers are beginning to find the first impulses of modern civilization.

All this is accomplished in the first 120 pages. After that it may be said that the Stream of History comes out of the dark, mythical mountains into the plains of recorded history. The narrative swings along splendidly from the dawn of civilization into the first organized society of the east. From there we follow the current northward through Greece and Rome into the Europe of the Dark Ages. The turbulent tides of the Middle Ages begin to clarify and the purpose of history begins to reveal itself. From this vantage point we see and understand the Renaissance and the age of science and democracy.

What a story it is! Written with erudition and academic accuracy, yet with straightforward language of a modern essayist. And the fine thing about Mr. Parsons' book is that he does not know it. He confesses his doubt and so becomes more plausible for his confession, more dependable for his refusal to play at omniscience. He has told a splendid story, vigorously, eloquently, convincingly; and when one puts down the book one is convinced that man is a noble creature, slowly, blindly, yet always hopefully carrying out the beneficent purpose of Providence.

Sometimes talk is cheap. Sometimes it isn't. Often a little of it costs a man a lot of money.

A writer remarks that there is no rest in the universe, but he probably never looked at the crowds on the park benches of the big cities.

We have all the people necessary now to drive the automobiles of the country, but more are needed driving the cows.

NEWS COMMENT AND VIEWS

The Diary of a New Yorker

by CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, June 8.—In one of the largest hotels in New York, where the average person might have the impression that no attention is paid to insignificant guests, there is a system of friendliness that makes visitors realize there is such a thing as hospitality in hard-hearted New York. This hotel has a man trained to visit male guests who are confined to rooms with illness. There is a woman to make the some visits to sick women guests.

Not long ago there was, in this particular hotel, a young woman from my Kentucky. She was alone, the few friends she had in New York didn't know she was in the city. She had an attack of tonsillitis and had to go to bed. For a few hours she made her condition worse by crying and worrying, because she was afraid she'd die of loneliness and inattention. But as soon as the manager learned of her illness, he got the hospitality machinery going. He arranged with telephone girls, who work in shifts, to spend of hours reading to the patients. He had a physician call, arrange for special broths, sent in flowers and placed a matron at her service to do such shopping as she needed.

A reader of the Diary asks: "Is it harder for a young writer to succeed in New York than in the old home town I have an ambition to be a novelist. I am willing to undergo hardships to realize it. I don't think I'll ever find encouragement here."

Supposing, of course, that he or she has the necessary talent, determination and energy, New York probably is the easiest place to succeed. There are more opportunities.

Margery Latimer came to New York four years ago from Portage, Wis., with no money and a determination to write. She refused to seek a job that would interfere with her ambition, and eked out a living as a manuscript reader and book reviewer, while writing a novel. Her diet consisted mostly of raw vegetables and stale bread. She found sympathetic friends, and persons of influence offered her financial aid, but she proudly refused it. There is plenty of such encouragement for ambitious and energetic youth in New York.

Miss Latimer's first novel, "We Are Incredible," is a success. Her short stories are in demand. "I am glad that I refused offers of subsidization that kind people made. It is better to stand on one's own feet," she told me. "I know that when I have something to write, I will write it whether or not I have had a satisfying dinner that day. The travail of poverty can even provide an added stimulus."

And there are the examples of Anne and Alice Timoney, of my Kentucky. They set up here as authors with a second-hand typewriter and a load of courage and determination. Their first published story—the one that always gives authors the biggest thrill—appeared in a publication that suspended before they were paid for it. They supported themselves writing publicity for banks while composing three plays, one of which, "Bottled," is winning their attention on Broadway.

The Timoney play, incidentally, is all about a woman who turned out the best whiskey in the state of Kentucky and was d—proud of it.

The some artists who had to desert Greenwich Village when the influx of wealthier folk made rents go up, are now being pushed out of the art colony in Sutton Place and the East River by the advance upon the section of affluent notables. The result is that the artists are no longer endeavoring to elude to the island, but are scattering into suburbs. Some are talking over abandoned farms. "Bohemia" is no more.

WHEN A DOG TEACHES HIMSELF

Do dogs teach themselves by association?

Of course they do. Most puppies raise a great commotion when they first find themselves tied. Yet only a few minutes are needed to convince a pup that his struggles are unavailing and that the sensible thing to do is to remain quiet. A pup tied to a tree carries on so frantically at first that a tender-hearted owner may think he'd better turn it loose. But the pup will soon become philosophical if just let alone.

A friend of mine had a dog that used to accompany him to the fields and woods, sometimes for hunting but often just for companionship. Frequently they went without a gun. The dog would amuse himself chasing rabbits. His master did not shoot rabbits but used his gun only for squirrels. Gradually the dog seemed to recognize that the presence of the gun meant squirrel hunting only and he seemed to know also, without being trained, that there should be no unnecessary confusion from chasing rabbits on such occasions. When he saw his master bring the gun he just trotted quietly along.

When your dog is out in the cold and barks at the front door and somebody lets him in, he goes to that door and barks the next time he desires to come in. But if he is admitted sometimes at the front door, then he finds it wise to try barking first at one place and then at the other. In other words, he uses his repertoire of efforts, not knowing which will avail.

THRASHING TIME?

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

LUXURIES OF THE BATH

In the morning, when hurry seems to dominate everything you do, your bath must, of necessity, be an awakening, invigorating, sketchy affair.

But at night, when body and nerves are tired, the bath should mean luxury and relaxation. There is no time when you can reclaim your physical fitness so well as during the bath hour. The evening bath should be warm even quite hot, if you like it, and most women, I know do.

It is little enough expense to provide yourself with all the luxuries of a perfect bath, for unless you seek rare and exotic scents in salts and talcum, you will find these articles may easily be fitted into the most modest budget.

Bath towels should be large enough to wrap warmly and comfortably around you. A mildly fragrant soap is most soothing to the senses, and bath salts are not only refreshing in their cool, fresh scent, but distinctly tonic in their action as well.

Bath talcum is an item no self-respecting bathroom should be without. I could write reams about talcum. Packed in the wide-mouthed boxes, it is convenient not only to use lavishly, if you wish, but to be sparing in application as well. The bigas well.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

SOME TERMS EXPLAINED

Are you immune to diphtheria? Most adults are. Some children are, also.

By immunization is meant that in the body there is already a natural antitoxin which would destroy diphtheria germs, should they be contracted.

Most babies are born with this antitoxin (absorbed through the blood from the mother). However, this immunity seldom lasts over six months. For this reason, it is not uncommon to give babies up to two years of age the toxin-antitoxin (t. a. t.) to protect against diphtheria, without the formality of a Shick test.

I'll explain that the Shick test means the injection into the forearm of a tiny quantity of the toxin of diphtheria germs—not the germs themselves—which is dissolved in sterile water. If the body already contains the natural antitoxin, this tiny bit of injected toxin is neutralized so there is no reaction, any more than there would be to a tiny amount of sterile water. If the body is not immune, Nature immediately sends more blood with its protective forces to the part and a tiny inflammatory spot results which fades in a very short time.

This is equally true of dogs in laboratory experiments. One of these is to put a dog into a little cage with a door that can be opened by pushing his nose exactly the right place. In trying to get out, he will eventually succeed by chance. He does not at once associate that chance act with getting his freedom. He only knows that he did something which succeeded: so he tries everything he thinks of and again one of them works. Gradually he eliminates unsuccessful efforts until he is able immediately to open the door. In all this he behaves exactly as people do. A salesman calling on a customer doesn't know just which phase of his selling talk will turn the trick. After a series of attempts, errors and successes, he learns which points are of no use, and tries on future customers only a treatment to cure diphtheria. Antitoxin is also used to prevent an immediate antidote (suscep-

The toxin-antitoxin consists of prepared diphtheria toxin (not the germs) mixed with a sufficient amount of antitoxin to render it harmless, but still leaving enough stimulating material to cause the body cells to manufacture a defense against diphtheria. In a few months, this is given in three doses, a week apart, and renders the child immune to diphtheria for some years, at least five or six years, and in some cases for life time.

Diphtheria is an exceedingly dangerous disease. The immediate treatment, if the disease is contracted, is full doses of antitoxin, and the sooner this is given, the more effective it is.

Some people will try to scare you into believing that antitoxin is "filthy animal matter." You don't think of blood transfusions which are given to save lives, as filthy animal matter, do you. No more is antitoxin filthy animal matter, for it is made from the blood of healthy young horses that have been made immune to diphtheria. So it contains the immediate antidote to its poisons. And it should be given just as you would give an immediate known antidote to any other poison which a child accidentally took.

Now let's straighten things out: The Shick test is a test merely. The t. a. t. is a treatment to prevent diphtheria, and antitoxin is a treatment to cure diphtheria. Antitoxin is also used to prevent an immediate antidote (suscep-

MENU HINT

To my mind veal is the most tasteless of the meats and needs "dressing up" a bit. A dressing similar to chicken dressing is used with roast veal. Cooked in casserole, with a bit of onion and green pepper, it is an attractive and appetizing dish.

Buttered Peas Radishes
Green Onions
Strawberry Shortcake Coffee

Today's Recipes

Veal Casserole—One and one-half pounds veal cut in pieces. Brown in bacon fat and onion. Then add one cup of half green pepper chopped, one cup or more of water or stock, season with pepper and salt and cook in casserole for two hours.

Suggestions

Important Trifles
Soften the butter a bit before creaming with the sugar. It will make the creaming process much easier.

Use the pieces of stale cake for a pudding, treating them the same as for bread pudding.

Keep the olive oil in the ice chest. It becomes rancid if allowed to get warm.

Juices from canned fruits may be saved and added to lemonade or other cooling drink served in hot weather.

Economical Cake

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

One cup granulated sugar, one third cup mixed butter and lard, yolk of two eggs, one teaspoon lemon flavoring, one cup sour milk in which has been dissolved one level teaspoon baking soda, or one-half teaspoon soda and one teaspoon baking powder, one and one-half cups flour. Bake in layers. Cook one cup sugar and one-half cup water until it boils, then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and beat until stiff. Spread on lower layer, then sprinkle with shredded coconut, then put on upper layer and do the same.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, June 8.—How deep's the Arctic ocean? The scientists are asking all our returning explorers now.

Formerly — is there land at the North Pole — was the query. Recent reports answer that question pretty definitely in the negative — or, if there's any land, there isn't much.

So now — what's the depth? — is the new puzzle.

The scientific folks say it really is very important.

If they can find out, maybe they'll know more about the tides—and weather—and fish—and possibly radio—and lots of things—they're not sure exactly what—but probably, whatever it is, it will prove to be extremely valuable.

Anyhow, they're curious.

Why then, don't some of our north polar tourists investigate?

Certainly there are enough of 'em these times—Gen. Noble, Capt. Wilkins, Commander Byrd, Capt. Amundsen—not to mention older-timers, like Admiral Peary and Dr. Cook.

Well — explain these authorities — it's mighty chilly, boring a hole through six or eight feet of ice, and taking soundings in the polar sea.

That's how the sonic depth finder happened to be suggested, as a means of speeding matters up.

But unfortunately it won't work.

The naval engineers, who specialize on the sonic depth finder, have been giving the idea their best attention, and they regret to advise that the scheme's n. g.

The sonic depth finder is a set in the bottom of a ship.

Ding, dong, ding—it goes, as the ship steams along, as fast as it likes. Down goes the noise to the bottom of the ocean—and back, as an echo, the seabed returns it to the ship. An expert on board clocks it, and knowing exactly how fast sound travels through the water, reads the depth right off, by ear.

It's accurate, rapid and easy—in all of which respects it differs from the old way of sounding with a lead, and up to four or five miles of wire.

The north polar plan was to fit one of these contraptions onto the bottom of an aircraft and flit around for awhile over the Arctic ocean, charting the whole thing.

It seemed so simple that the scientific brotherhood fell for it in job lots.

The only doubt some of them expressed was—wouldn't the ice give back the echo, instead of the seabed? But the more hopeful ones said—no — there might be two echoes, but science had sense enough to sort 'em out.

Come now the navy engineers with this discouraging finding—

Not only would ice send up the only echo the airman would get—even ordinary water would. The aviator would get his height above sea level and nothing else—and he has plenty of instruments to tell him that now.

The sonic depth finder is good for only "one medium," as the navy engineers put it. You can measure one with it—and no more. It's limit would be one layer of a layer cake.

Shucks! — another scientific dream shot full of holes.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Shall She Marry Man She Admires?

Should a girl marry a man she admires but does not love? Many think that respect, admiration, congeniality are all that is necessary to make a happy marriage. Can one really love a person one does not admire? And what are a girl's best chances of happiness—with a man she loves but does not think will ever make a fine man, or with the man she admires immensely but thinks of only as a brother? Here is her letter:

My Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl just 18, and have been out of high school a year. I have a problem which, to me, is very perplexing. Three years ago I began going with a young man who is now just 25. He is one of the leading young men in our church and of splendid character. His people seem to think a great deal of me and so does he. I thought I loved him, too, until last winter when he asked me to be his wife. Then I found that I cared for him only as a brother. He seemed broken-hearted about it, but did not try to persuade me to marry him, anyhow.

Then I began going with another nice boy near my own age. My first friend did not seem the least bit jealous. He thought I cared for this boy, and he seemed to throw us together as much as he could. I like this younger boy very much, but I don't believe he will ever make as fine a man as my first friend. He did not act serious toward me, but one of his chums told me that he cared a great deal for me. I knew that I am young to be taking things seriously like that, Mrs. Lee, but it seems that I will have to make a choice one way or the other. They are both fine fellows, and it is hard to decide between them. I shall not see either of them again until this fall, unless my first friend should come up here this summer. Sometimes I think I could learn to love him very much, and other times I just respect him, but he is my ideal of manhood in every way. Could that be true love? Would I be happy if I married him? Would it be an injustice to him for me to marry him without loving him when he loves me so devotedly? What shall I do?

"PERPLEXED."

Did you ever read a book called "Peter Whiffle." Perplexed. Probably not. In one chapter the hero planned to go abroad, and was in a great stew about getting ready, when suddenly it came to him that he didn't HAVE to go, and that thought calmed him. Now you don't HAVE to marry anyone, you know, and I wouldn't, if I were you. I don't think you really love either of these boys. The younger one is probably too young to want to settle down, anyway. Just sit tight, see as much of life as you can until you are sure you want to marry a man, and then you'll know you are right. Don't let anybody or anything hurry you in marriage. Make it a life business when you do.

Bluish Blonde and Worried Blue Eyes, your letters are not serious, are they? I think I will let you work out your own problems, if any.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THREE GUESSES

At Bobolink's last remark the little Rabbit's ears twitched with surprise. And Peter was so curious he had to interrupt Bobolink's story with a question.

"Where were you, Bobolink?" cried he.

"Over on 'Ostrich Farm,'" chirped Mrs. Bobolink, taking the story out of her husband's beak. "And what fun we had there! Shall we tell them about it Bob?"

"Say yes, Mr. Bobolink. Please, please! Tell us, do!" And the combined pleas of the boy and the two rabbits were more than the good natured little Bobolink could resist. So off on another tale he started.

"As I think I said before, wife and I had flown up to the branch in the tree and we perched there so long, hoping that Mr. or Mrs. Trumpeter would return, that we must have dropped to sleep again. 'It was hot, or we would never have done such a thing. Fall to sleep in a tree! Imagine it! But at any rate, we didn't know another thing until we heard a terrible roar. Frightened, we almost tumbled from the branch. Just in time we caught ourselves from tumbling right into the open mouth of — what do you think?'"

Bobolink stopped chirping and swayed back and forth upon his clover stalk. Peter and the Rabbits were curious as they could be.

"How could we know whose mouth you nearly fell into?" cried the three in chorus. "Do tell us, quick."

But Bobolink only swayed the faster.

Bobolink, popping out of his little rabbit head.

"No. Guess again," commanded Bobolink.

"Perhaps it was a fox," said Mrs. Gray Rabbit, timidly and under her breath, looking nervously over her shoulder as she spoke.

"No. Try once more," chuckled Mrs. Bobolink. "It's the boy's turn now."

Peter thought for a moment. "Now I have it!" cried he. "You said you heard a roar. Bobolink, I'll bet you nearly tumbled into the open mouth of a lion!"

Bobolink shook his head. "Wrong again. Three guesses and not one of you has come near to the truth!"

Next, "Tallest Bird in the World."

But as soon as the manager learned of her illness, he got the hospitality machinery going. He arranged with telephone girls who work in shifts, to spend off hours reading to the patients, had a physician call, arrange for special broths, sent in flowers and placed a matron at her service to do such shopping as she needed.

A reader of the Diary asks: "Is it harder for a young writer to succeed in New York than in the old home town I have an ambition to be a novelist. I am willing to undergo hardships to realize it. I don't think I'll ever find encouragement here."

Supposing, of course, that he or she has the necessary talent, determination and energy. New York probably is the easiest place to succeed. There are more opportunities.

Margery Latimer came to New York four years ago from Portage, Wis., with no money and a determination to write. She refused to seek a job that would interfere with her ambition, and eked out a living as a manuscript reader and book reviewer, while writing a novel. Her diet consisted mostly of raw vegetables and stale bread. She found sympathetic friends, and persons of influence offered her financial aid, but she proudly refused it. There is plenty of such encouragement for ambitious and energetic youth in New York.

Miss Latimer's first novel, "We Are Inevitable," is a success. Her short stories are in demand.

"I am glad that I refused offers of subsidization that kind people made. It is better to stand on one's own feet," she told me. "I know that when I have something to write, I will write it whether or not I have had a satisfying dinner that day. The travail of poverty can even provide an added stimulus."

And there are the examples of Anne and Alice Timoney, of my Kentucky. They set up here as authors with a second-hand typewriter and a load of courage and determination. Their first published story—the one that always gives authors the biggest thrill—appeared in a publication that suspended before they were paid for it. They supported themselves writing publicity for banks while composing three plays, one of which, "Bottled," is winning them attention on Broadway.

The Timoneys play, incidentally, is all about a woman who turned out the best whiskey in the state of Kentucky and was d—proud of it.

Some artists who had to desert Greenwich Village when the influx of wealthier folk made rents go up, are now being pushed out of the colony in Sutton Place and the East River by the advance upon the section of affluent notables. The result is that the artists are no longer endeavoring to elude to the island, but are scattering into suburbs. Some are taking over abandoned farms. "Bohemia" is no more.

WHEN A DOG

TEACHES HIMSELF

Do dogs teach themselves by association?

Of course they do. Most puppies raise a great commotion when they first find themselves tied. Yet only a few minutes are needed to convince a pup that his struggles are unavailing and that the sensible thing to do is to remain quiet. A pup tied to a tree carries on so frantically at first that a tender-hearted owner may think he had better turn it loose. But the pup will soon become philosophical if just let alone.

A friend of mine had a dog that used to accompany him to the fields and woods, sometimes for hunting but often just for companionship. Frequently they went without a gun. The dog would amuse himself chasing rabbits. His master did not shoot rabbits but used his gun only for squirrels. Gradually the dog seemed to recognize that the presence of the gun meant squirrel hunting only and he seemed to know also, without being trained, that there should be no unnecessary confusion from chasing rabbits on such occasions. When he saw his master bring the gun he just trotted quietly along.

When your dog is out in the cold and barks at the front door and somebody lets him in, he goes to that door and barks the next time he desires to come in. But if he is admitted sometimes at the front door, then he finds that the barking first at one place and then at the other. In other words, he uses his repertoire of efforts, not knowing which will avail.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

LUXURIES OF THE BATH

In the morning, when hurry seems to dominate everything you do, your bath must, of necessity be an awakening, invigorating, sketchy affair.

But at night, when body and nerves are tired, the bath should mean luxury and relaxation. There is no time when you can reclaim your physical fitness so well as during the bath hour. The evening bath should be warm, even quite hot, if you like it, and most women, I know do.

It is little enough expense to provide yourself with all the luxuries of a perfect bath, for unless you seek rare and exotic scents in salts and talcum, you will find these articles may easily be fitted into the most modest budget.

Bath towels should be large enough to wrap warmly and comfortably around you. A mildly fragrant soap is most soothing to the senses, and bath salts are not only refreshing in their cool, fresh scent, but distinctly tonic in their action as well.

Bath talcum is an item no self-respecting bathroom should be without. I could write reams about talcum. Packed in the wide-mouthed boxes, it is convenient not only to use lavishly, if you wish, but to be sparing in application as well. The big soft bath puffs are easy to use, and if you have spent minute after minute shaking your powder out of a perforated can, you will welcome delightedly the new box of bath talc.

In the bathroom develops the pride of body which beauty demands of her satellites. In the ancient world the public baths were decorated with perfect pieces of sculpture, art to develop that serenity which cultivated in the bathers the will to be lovely and placed for them the ideals of physical perfection.

Bath brushes, with long helpful handles, come in every variety of softness and stiffness, and every hue of enameled finish. Let me take a moment to advise you of the care of brushes and sponges. The sponge must be aired often by an open window, and preferably in the sunlight. Bath and nail brushes should be turned downward, so the water drips out of the bristles. If turned on the back, the water runs back and rots the wood.

A pretty bathroom, hot water, faintly fragrant bath salts, a jar of pasteurized cream and a generous box of talcum will provide you an hour of perfect luxury and restore to you not only physical comfort, but quiet nerves as well.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

SOME TERMS EXPLAINED

Most adults are. Some children are, also.

By immunization is meant that in the body there is already a natural antitoxin which would destroy diphtheria germs, should they be contracted.

Most babies are born with this antitoxin absorbed through the blood from the mother. However, this immunity seldom lasts over six months. For this reason, it is not uncommon to give babies up to two years of age the toxin-antitoxin (t. a. t.) to protect against diphtheria, without the formality of a Shick test.

I'll explain that the Shick test means the injection into the forearm of a tiny quantity of the toxin of diphtheria germs—not the germs themselves—which is dissolved in sterile water. If the body already contains the natural antitoxin, this tiny bit of injected toxin is neutralized so there is no reaction, any more than there would be to a tiny amount of sterile water. If the body is not immune, Nature immediately sends more blood with its protective forces to the part and a tiny inflammatory spot results which fades in a very short time.

The toxin-antitoxin consists of prepared diphtheria toxin (the germs) mixed with a sufficient amount of antitoxin to render it harmless, but still leaving enough stimulating material to cause the body cells to manufacture a defense against diphtheria, in a few months. This is given in three doses, a week apart, and renders the child immune to diphtheria for some years, at least five or six years, and in some cases for life time.

Diphtheria is an exceedingly dangerous disease. The immediate treatment, if the disease is contracted, is full doses of antitoxin, and the sooner this is given, the more effective it is.

Some people will try to scare you into believing that antitoxin is "filthy animal matter." You don't think of blood transfusions, are given to save lives, as filthy animal matter, do you? No more is antitoxin filthy animal matter, for it is made from the blood of healthy young horses that have been made immune to diphtheria. So it contains the immediate antidote to its poisons. And it should be given, just as you would give an immediate known antidote to any other poison which a child accidentally took.

Now let's straighten things out: The Shick test is a test merely. The t. a. t. is a treatment to prevent diphtheria, and antitoxin is a treatment to cure diphtheria. Antitoxin is also used to prevent an immediate antidote (suscep-

To my mind veal is the most tasteless of the meats and needs "dressing up" a bit. A dressing similar to chicken dressing is used with roast veal. Cooked in casserole, with a bit of onion and green pepper, it is an attractive and appetizing dish.

Veal Casserole—One and one-half pounds veal cut in pieces. Brown in bacon fat add onion and brown also. Then add one-half green pepper chopped, one cup or more of water or stock, season with pepper and salt and cook in casserole for two hours.

Suggestions

Important Trifles
Soften the butter a bit before creaming with the sugar. It will make the creaming process much easier.

Use the pieces of stale cake for a pudding, treating them the same as for bread pudding.

Keep the olive oil in the ice chest. It becomes rancid if allowed to get warm.

Juices from canned fruits may be saved and added to lemonade or other cooling drink served in hot weather.

One cup granulated sugar, one third cup mixed butter and lard, yolk of two eggs, one teaspoon lemon flavoring, one cup sour milk in which has been dissolved one level teaspoon baking soda, or one-half teaspoon soda and one teaspoon baking powder, one and one-half cups flour. Bake in layers. Cook one cup sugar and one-half cup water until it spins a long, fine thread. Pour into the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and beat until stiff. Spread on lower layer, then sprinkle with shredded coconut, then put on upper layer and do the same.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, June 8.—How deep is the Arctic ocean?—scientists are asking all our returning explorers now.

Formerly — is there land at the North Pole — was the query.

Recent reports answer that question pretty definitely in the negative — or, if there's any land, there isn't much.

So now — what's the depth? — is the new puzzle.

The scientific folks say it really is very important.

If they can find out, maybe they'll know more about the tides — and weather — and fish — and possibly radio — and lots of things — they're not sure exactly what — but probably, whatever it is, it will prove to be extremely valuable.

Anyhow, they're curious.

Why then, don't some of our north polar tourists investigate?

Certainly there are enough of 'em these times — Gen. Noble, Capt. Wilkins, Commander Byrd, Capt. Amundsen — not to mention older-timers, like Admiral Peary and Dr. Cook.

Well — explain these authorities — it's mighty chilly, boring a hole through six or eight feet of ice, and taking soundings in the polar sea.

That's how the sonic depth finder happened to be suggested, as a means of speeding matters up.

But unfortunately it won't work.

The naval engineers, who specialize on the sonic depth finder, have been giving the idea their best attention, and they regret to advise that the scheme's n. g.

The sonic depth finder is a jet in the bottom of a ship.

Ding, dong, ding — it goes, as the ship steams along, as fast as it likes. Down goes the noise to the bottom of the ocean — and back, as an echo, the seabed returns it to the ship. An expert on board clocks it, and knowing exactly how fast sound travels through the water, reads the depth right off, by ear.

It's accurate, rapid and easy — in all of which respects it differs from the old way of sounding with a lead, and up to four or five miles of wire.

The north polar plan was to fit one of these contraptions onto the bottom of an aircraft and flit around for awhile over the Arctic ocean, charting the whole thing.

It seemed so simple that the scientific brotherhood fell for it in job lots.

The only doubt some of them expressed was — wouldn't the ice give back the echo, instead of the seabed? But the more hopeful ones said — no — there might be two echoes, but science had sense enough to sort 'em out.

Come now the navy engineers with this discouraging finding.

Not only would it send up the only echo the airman would get — even ordinary water would. The aviator would get his height above sea level and nothing else — and he has plenty of instruments to tell him that now.

The sonic depth finder is good for only "one medium," as the navy engineers put it. You can measure one with it — and no more. It's limit would be one layer of a layer cake.

Shucks! — another scientific dream shot full o' holes.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Shall She Marry Man She

Admires?

Should a girl marry a man she admires but does not love? Many think that respect, admiration, congeniality are all that is necessary to make a happy marriage. Can one really love a person one does not admire? And what are a girl's best chances of happiness — with a man she loves but does not think will ever make a fine man, or with the man she admires immensely but thinks of only as a brother? Here is her letter:

"My Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl just 18, and have been out of high school a year. I have a problem which, to me, is very perplexing. Three years ago I began going with a young man who is now just 25. He is one of the leading young men in our church and of splendid character. His people seem to think a great deal of me and so does he. I thought I loved him, too, until last winter when he asked me to be his wife. Then I found that I cared for him only as a brother. He seemed broken-hearted about it, but did not try to persuade me to marry him, anyhow.

"Then I began going with another nice boy near my own age. My first friend did not seem the least bit jealous. He thought I cared for this boy, and he seemed to throw us together as much as he could. I like this younger boy very much, but I don't believe he will ever make as fine a man as my first friend. He did not act serious toward me, but one of his chums told me that he cared a great deal for me. I know that I am young to be taking things seriously like that, Mrs. Lee, but it seems that I will have to make a choice one way or the other. They are both fine fellows, and it is hard to decide between them. I shall not see either of them again until this fall, unless my first friend should come up here this summer. Sometimes I think I could learn to love him very much, and other times I just respect him, but he is my ideal of manhood in every way. Could that be true love? Would I be happy if I married him? Would it be an injustice to him for me to marry him without loving him when he loves me so devotedly? What shall I do?"

"PERPLEXED."

Did you ever read a book called "Peter Whiffle." Perplexed? Probably not. In one chapter the hero planned to go abroad, and was in a great stew about getting ready, when suddenly it came to him that he didn't HAVE to go, and that thought calmed him. Now you don't HAVE to marry anyone, you know, and I wouldn't, if I were you. I don't think you really love your marriage. Make it a life business when you do.

Bluish Blonde and Worried Blue Eyes, your letters are not serious, are they? I think I will let you work out your own problems, if any.

Peter's Adventure

THREE GUESSES

At Bobolink's last remark the little Rabbit's ears twitched with surprise. And Peter was so curious he had to ask for this boy, Bobolink's story with a question.

"Where were you, Bobolink?" cried he.

"Over on Ostich Farm," chirped Mrs. Bobolink, taking the story out of her husband's beak. And what fun we had there. Shall we tell them about it Bob?"

"Say yes, Mr. Bobolink, please, please! Tell us, do!" And the combined pleas of the boy and the two rabbits were more than the good natured little Bobolink could resist. So off on another tale he started.

"As I think I said before, wife and I had flown up to the branch in the tree and we perched there so long, hoping that Mex or Trumper would return, that we must have dropped to sleep again. 'It was hot, or we would never have done such a thing. Fall to sleep in a tree! Imagine it! But at any rate, we didn't know another thing until we heard a terrible roar. Frightened, we almost tumbled from the branch. Just in time we caught ourselves from tumbling right into the open mouth of — what do you think?"

Bobolink stopped chirping and swayed back and forth upon his clever stalk. Peter and the Rabbits were curious as they could be.

"How could we know whose mouth you nearly fell into?" cried the three in chorus. "Do tell us, quick!"

But Bobolink only swayed the faster.

"Guess!" said he, and his wife chuckled teasingly. "Into the mouth of a — cat!"

pepping out of his little rabbit head.

boy's turn now."

Peter thought for a moment. "Now I have it!" cried he.

"You said you heard a roar, Bobolink, I'll bet you nearly tumbled into the open mouth of a lion!"

Bobolink shook his head. "Wrong again. Three guesses and not one of you has come near to the truth!"

Downtown Country Club Beats Firemen 14 To 1

FIRE FIGHTERS GET FIRST SETBACK BUT ESCAPE WHITEWASH

Frame Hurls Well To Subdue Enemy; Losers Crippled

Firemen submitted to their first defeat of the season after three straight victories when The Downtown Country Club softball team pounded out a 14 to 1 victory in a National League game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Thursday night.

The defeat dropped the Firemen into a tie with the County club nine for second place and left the Downtown Country Club in undisputed possession of first place for the first time. The Firemen team is still undefeated, while the Firemen and County Club have each won three games and lost one.

Firemen were handicapped Thursday night, playing without the services of Downey, regular pitcher. L. Cope started in the box for the Firemen but was hit freely and retired in the third in favor of Cain, who finished the game. Frame and McCurran formed the battery for the winners.

The winners fielded well and LeSourd in left field, had a majority of the put outs, including a brilliant one-hand catch off L. Davis. L. Cope scored the only Firemen run in the fourth inning.

The unbeaten Firemen Cigar Store nine meets the Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity team Friday night.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

Derrell Pratt may be thought of first by most baseball fans as the second baseman of the Yankees and a member of their wrecking crew back in the early days of the Miller Huggins regime.

But today Pratt ranks as one of the most astute business men in the national pastime.

Starting his third year as manager of the Waco club of the Texas league he has already made himself known in the southwest.

In his first year as head of the Waco outfit Pratt sold Andy Cohen to the New York Giants for the sweet price of $25,000. Then the Cleveland Indians gave him approximately $40,000 in cash for Willis Hudlin, now one of the hurling aces of the American league club. Max West, brilliant young outfielder, was later peddled to the Brooklyn Dodgers for $15,000. Frank Wilson, outfielder now with Shreveport, was purchased by the White Sox for a similar amount.

There were one or two other sales of lesser importance before the present season opened. It is considered that the sale price of Cohen and Hudlin virtually reimbursed Pratt and his friends for the money they tossed in to buy the franchise.

While Pratt was selling these stars to the major leagues he not only developed a popular, but what was more to the point, winning ball club for Waco. The team finished second in the league race last season.

Pratt and his aides give due credit to Don Curtis, scout of the club for digging up Hudlin, Cohen and the others—as well as many of the various teams, who haven't had the chance yet to move up.

KNUTE HANSON

Knute Hanson, heavyweight, was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, on Dec. 6, 1903.

Hanson's rise as a fighter was sensational, though he has had but twenty-one fights since he began his career in 1922, ten of these were knockouts.

Knute's most noted achievement was his knockout of Phil Scott in a round last year. He also holds kayoes over Romero Rojas and Joe Lawton and decisions over Benny Touchstone and Monte Munn. He has been defeated by Paulino Uzcudun and Franz Dienne.

Hanson is a giant. He is six feet, four inches tall, and weighs about 207 pounds.

One of the best rifle teams in the east this year is said to be the Lehigh university R. O. T. C. squad.

French tennis courts have hard surfaces, English courts usually are turf.

There are those who say Sammy Mandell, lightweight champ, has greater speed than the revered Benny Leonard.

Wally Young has won the modified marathon over Berkshire road from North Adams to Adams, Mass., seven consecutive times.

Mark Koenig is once again in great shape to take over the short stopping job of the Yankees.

The gate at recent big fights in New York has slumped considerably, with the Mandell-McLarnin fuss the best example.

George Cumba, of Tacoma, Wash., swam twenty-five yards in ten seconds, a world's record, ten years ago.

F. H. Brill, of Chicago, won the first national bowling championship in 1901.

ALL OUT DOORS AND WHERE TO GO

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—May is the parental month in which Nature shows her greatest development. Ernest Thompson Seton, the famous author and naturalist, calls it "the planting or song moon." Most all of the primitive people called the months "moons." The birds are feeding their nestlings. Near every singing male you will find a nesting female, somewhere. Baby rabbits appear along the roadside. Young squirrels may soon be seen as they venture from the den where they were born.

Bass are spawning on the hard bottoms or sandy bars. Mother catfish are caring for their young under some overhanging roots, or in an old muskrat hole in the bank. It is the bloom month, of wild flowers, of love and song when Nature is in her happiest mood. Everything seems to come to life in May.

Away up North, in Canadian marshlands, wild ducks and geese are nesting. The Migratory Bird Treaty between the United States and Canada has given them protection in their flight from their winter home in the South. Once these birds were slaughtered by millions during the mating and nesting season. It is only since 1913 that Spring shooting has been made illegal.

American hunters first realized the folly of sport that kills during the parental month. The organized fishermen are now advocating legislation to prohibit taking of game fish during the parental season.

Spring is the time to give Nature, to love Nature, and to give Nature a chance to reproduce her kind. Later in the year, the taking of game or fish, for the benefit and use of man is altogether proper, except, of course, the few species of fish that spawn in the Fall, such as the trout.

In speaking of the moons or seasons in the interpretation of the American Indians, the quaint and fitting names are of interest.

March is the "awakening or crow moon"; April the "wild goose or rose moon"; May the "planting or song moon"; June the "rose moon"; July the "thunder moon"; August the "green corn or red moon"; September the "falling leaf moon"; November the "mad night moon"; December the "snow or cold moon"; and February the "hunger moon."

The parental season will soon be over and vacation season will be here. You will be wanting to go fishing. Here's a tip on a few good places to go:

East Harbor, in Ottawa County, near Danville, is a splendid location for large mouth black bass, and blue gills. There is good small bass fishing not so far away at Put-in-Bay.

Chippewa Lake, in Medina County, is a good place for large mouth bass, speckled bass, crappie, perch, catfish and bluegills. One of Ohio's few natural lakes.

Chippewa Lake is reached by Interurban from Cleveland or from Mansfield. There are also good roads through Mansfield or Medina to the lake. By writing to Chippewa Community Hotel you can arrange details for a visit to the lake. The post office is Chippewa Lake, O.

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

The papers say the yawl racing season is on. Next to English channel swimming it is our wettest sport.

Yawls are little boats with big sails. They look like circus tents taking a ride on a skiff.

To know how to pilot a yawl one must be a great swimmer, because the cargo consists mostly of waves.

When a yawl turns around it leans over so far the fish have a hard time keeping from being speared by the mast.

There are more rope and strings to be pulled on a yawl than at a political convention.

Sir Tom Lipton, the only man living who has been defeated other than the Phillies, now plans a yawl gallop across the Pacific.

The boats will line up in San Diego, set sail and let the wind do its worst. It probably will.

Downtown Country Club Beats Firemen 14 To 1

FIRE FIGHTERS GET FIRST SETBACK BUT ESCAPE WHITEWASH

Frame Hurls Well To Subdue Enemy; Losers Crippled

Firemen submitted to their first defeat of the season after three straight victories when The Downtown Country Club team pounded out a 14 to 1 victory in a National League game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Thursday night.

The defeat dropped the Firemen into a tie with the County club nine for second place and left the Downtown Country Club in undisputed possession of first place for the first time. The Firemen team is still undefeated, while the Firemen and County Club have each won three games and lost one.

Firemen were handicapped Thursday night, playing without the services of Downey, regular pitcher. L. Cope started in the box for the Firemen but was hit fairly and retired in the third in favor of Cain, who finished the game. Frame and McCutchan formed the battery for the winners.

The winners fielded well and LeSourd in left field, had a majority of the put outs, including a brilliant one-hand catch off L. Davis. L. Cope scored the only Firemen run in the fourth inning.

The unbeaten Firemen Cigar Store nine meets the Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity team Friday night.

D. T. C. Club lineup: McCutchan, c; Patterson, ss; Huston, 1b; Parrott, 2b; LeSourd, 3b; Finlay, 3b; Highley, rf; Eckler, cf; Frame, p; Eavey, cf.

Firemen lineup: J. Haller, 2b; Towles, ss; L. Cope, p; Cain, c; Cope, c; L. Davis, 1b; J. Cain, 1b; R. Britley, cf; G. Haller, rf; O. Wolfery, 3b; Swartz, rf; Dickey, cf.

DOOLEY IS DEAD
YONKERS, N. Y., June 8.—Johnny Dooley, comedian with Earl Carroll's Vanities show until a month ago, died yesterday at the Homeopathic hospital here. He was operated on May 26 for intestinal disorders believed to have resulted from his work on the stage.

THEIR DOUBLE PLAYS HELP REDS

The Cincinnati Reds' infield, which is doing yeoman service to the team in its pennant dash in the National league. Experts regard these four chaps as the fastest double-play combination in the majors. They are: George Kelly, first base, lower right; Hugh Critz, second base, upper right; Horace Ford, shortstop, upper left; and Charles Dresen, third base, lower left.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

Derrell Pratt may be thought of first by most baseball fans as the second baseman of the Yanks and a member of their wrecking crew back in the early days of the Miller Huggins regime.

But today Pratt ranks as one of the most astute business men in the national pastime.

Starting his third year as manager of the Waco club of the Texas league he has already made himself known in the southwest.

In his first year as head of the Waco outfit Pratt sold Andy Cohen to the New York Giants for the sweet price of $25,000. Then the Cleveland Indians gave him approximately $40,000 in cash for Willis Hudlin, now one of the leading aces of the American league club, Max West, brilliant young outfielder, was later peddled to the Brooklyn Dodgers for $15,000. Frank Wilson, outfielder now with Shreveport, was purchased by the White Sox for a similar amount.

There were one or two other sales of lesser importance before the present season opened. It is considered that the sale price of Cohen and Hudlin virtually reimbursed Pratt and his friends for the money they tossed in to buy the franchise.

While Pratt was selling these stars to the major leagues he not only developed a popular, but what was more to the point, winning ball club for Waco. The team finished second in the league race last season.

Pratt and his aides give due credit to Don Curtis, scout of the club for digging up Hudlin, Cohen and the others—as well as many of the various teams, who haven't had the chance yet to move up.

Personalities IN SPORT

KNUTE HANSON
Knute Hanson, heavyweight, was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, on Dec. 6, 1903.

Hanson's rise as a fighter was sensational, though he has had but twenty-one fights since he began his career in 1922, ten of these were knockouts.

Knute's most noted achievement was his knockout of Phil Scott in a round late last year. He also holds kayotes over Romero Rojas and Joe Lawson and decisions over Benny Torchstone and Monte Mann. He has been defeated by Paolino Uzcudun and Franz Dielno.

Hanson is a giant. He is six feet, four inches tall, and weighs about 207 pounds.

Sport Shorts
Jack Dempsey, the non-pareil, was lightweight champion of the world for less than a year. Then he retired.

Paul Easterling and Chalmers Ossel are baseball rookies but old army veterans.

One of the best rifle teams in the east this year is said to be the Lehigh university R. O. T. C. squad.

French tennis courts have hard surfaces, English courts usually are turf.

There are those who say Sammy Mandell, lightweight champ, has greater speed than the revered Benny Leonard.

Wally Young has won the modified marathon over Berkshire road from North Adams to Adams, Mass., seven consecutive times.

Mark Koenig is once again in great shape to take over the short stopping job of the Yankees.

The gate at recent big fights in New York has slumped considerably, with the Mandell-McLarnin fust the best example.

George Cumba, of Tacoma, Wash., swam twenty-five yards in ten seconds, a world's record, ten years ago.

F. H. Brill, of Chicago, won the first national bowling championship in 1901.

ALL OUT DOORS AND WHERE TO GO

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—May is the parental month in which Nature shows her greatest development. Ernest Thompson Seton, the famous author and naturalist, calls it "the planting or sowing moon." Most all of the primitive people called the months "moons." The birds are feeding their nestlings. Near every nesting male you will find a nesting female, somewhere. Baby rabbits appear along the roads. Young squirrels may soon be seen as they venture from the den where they were born.

Bass are spawning on the hard bottoms or sandy bars. Mother catfish are caring for their young under some overhanging roots, or in an old blum root hole in the bank. Later in the year, when Nature is in her happiest mood. Everything seems to come to life in May.

Away up North, in Canadian marshlands, wild ducks and geese are nesting. The Migratory Bird Treaty between the United States and Canada has given them protection in their flight from their winter home in the South. Once these birds were slaughtered by millions during the mating and nesting season. It is only since 1913 that Spring shooting has been made illegal.

American hunters first realized the folly of sport that kills during the parental months. The organized fishermen are now advocating legislation to prohibit taking of game fish during the parental season.

Spring is the time to give Nature, to love Nature, and to give Nature a chance to reproduce her kind. Of man is altogether proper, except, of course, the few species of fish that spawn in the Fall, such as the trout.

In speaking of the moons or seasons in the interpretation of the American Indians, the quaint and fitting names are of interest.

March is the "awakening or crow moon"; April the "wild goose or green grass moon"; May the "planting or sowing moon"; June the "rose moon"; July the "thunder moon"; August the "green corn or red moon"; September the "harvest moon"; October the "falling leaf moon"; November the "upward moon"; December the "long night moon"; January the "snow or cold moon"; and February the "hunger moon."

The parental season will soon be over and yet another season will be here. You will be wanting to go fishing. Here's a tip on a few good places to go:

East Harbor, in Ottawa County, near Danville, is a splendid location for large mouth black bass, and blue gills. There is good small bass fishing not so far away at Put-in-Bay.

Chippewa Lake, in Medina County, is a good place for large mouth bass, speckled bass, crappies, perch, catfish and bluegills. One of Ohio's few natural lakes.

Chippewa Lake is reached by from Put-in-Bay. There are also good roads through Mansfield or Medina to the lake. By writing to Chippewa Community Hotel you can arrange details for a visit to the lake. The post office is Chippewa Lake, O.

Pitticisms
BY BILL RITT
The papers say the yawl racing season is next. Next to English channel swimming it is our wettest sport.

Yawls are little boats with big sails. They look like circus tents taking a ride on a skiff.

To know how to pilot a yawl one must be a great swimmer, because the cargo consists mostly of waves.

When a yawl turns around it leans over so far the fish have a hard time keeping from being separated by the mast.

There are more rope and strings to be pulled on a yawl than at a political convention.

Sir Tom Lipton, the only man living who has been defeated often by the Phillies, now plans a yawl gallop across the Pacific.

The boats will line up in San Diego, set sail and let the wind do its worst. It probably will.

Sportistory
Friday, June 8
Babe Ruth hit his fourth home run of the 1928 season and his twentieth and twenty-first of the 1928 season.

For the second time in two days Tom Spring, heavyweight champion claimant of England, whipped Jack Langan at bare knuckles, 1924. This fight was held at Chichester Spring and lasted seventy-six rounds. The day before Spring had won at Worcester, England, when Langan fouled him in the fourth round.

GLIMPSES OF OHIO HISTORY

STURDY "mountain ships" made for negotiating the perilous grades over the mountainous country between the Atlantic seaboard cities and the far-away destinations in Ohio.

IN THE DAYS OF THE CONESTOGA WAGON

EVEN the sophisticated youngster who graduated from high school last month knows something of the lore of covered wagon days—from family history or from hearsay.

But few of them know that the prairie schooners that carried civilization westward was an evolution of the cumbersome Conestoga wagon.

The name coming, apparently, from the "mountain ships" were the principal means of freight transportation from the Atlantic seaboard to the new "western" civilization driven by Ohio. Sleek, powerful horses, driven by a picturesque daring race of men, were the pride of the operators of a great system of transportation.

Each wagon carried its tar bucket from which was drawn the best known axle lubricant at that time.

The evolution in transportation suggests the evolution of lubricants that has made possible greater economies by many an operator of freight motor buses lubricated with Loreco Motor Oil and Greases.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The meaning of the cross is portrayed in human sin at its peak, salvation at its highest cost, the divine love at its summit and the victory of redeeming love. The aim of this lesson should be to realize more fully what the Saviour did for us, that we be more grateful to him and more devoted to his service.

V. 22. "And they bring him to a place, Golgotha, which is being interpreted, the place of a skull." From Pilate's judgment, Jesus was led to this place; he was made to wear his own cross, but an African Jew was compelled to share the burden. The disciples had disappeared but a little group of women followed, bewailing his fate. For centuries, lines of prophesies were converging at Golgotha from which ever since have issued streams of blessing.

V. 23. "And they offered him wine mingled with myrror; but he received it not." It was customary among Jews to lessen the agony by deadening the faculties; Jesus would keep his mind unclouded to the last and hence refused the drink.

V. 24. "And they crucified him, and part his garments among them, casting lots upon them, what each should take." Crucifixion is the most terrible of all tortures invented by cruel men. All the horrors of this death burst upon him in flames of agony so terrible that in a few hours his life was consumed. Little did these soldiers realize the overshadowing significance of Christ's death while they were busy casting a few strands of this world's goods.

V. 25. "And the superscription of his accusation was written, 'The King of the Jews.' Pilate himself prescribed the title, in grim sarcasm against the Jews who wanted him to change it. These Pilate's sarcasm proclaimed the universality of the gospel, that Christianity was to go into all the world as Christ commanded.

V. 26. "When the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour. Nature manifested mysterious sympathy with the scene; the sun hid his glories from the awful spectacle, and the earth quaked as though convulsed with mortal agony. The outer darkness was a shadow of the deeper darkness that gathered around the soul of Jesus."

V. 27. "At nine o'clock, Jesus cried with a loud voice, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' The cry expresses the most terrible depth of suffering of Christ. When our sins were laid upon him, like a mother saying 'I can't stand it' when her child suffers, so God seemed to have turned his face away from that awful moment of divine suffering as if he too said, 'I can't stand it.'

V. 28. "And Jesus uttered in a loud voice and gave up the ghost." Jesus shouted like a conqueror, 'I am finished.' He surrendered his life, it was not taken from him as indicated in his last words 'Father into thy hands I commend my spirit.'

V. 29. "And when the centurion saw that he so gave up the ghost he said, 'This man was the son of God.' This is the noble confession of one who stood at the cross and was constrained to tell the truth by what he saw and heard. It is the confession God wants every man to make.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. Why was Jesus placed between two robbers?
2. Why did the disciples not stay with Jesus till the last?
3. Why did Jesus refuse the drink first offered and then accept it later?
4. How deeply is the principle of sacrifice built into the world?

5. In what sense must we bear a cross?
6. What is the atonement?

7. Why did Jesus cry out, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?'
Clericus says, 'The highest possible expression of the love of God to man was given in the atoning death of Jesus. At an infinite cost, God has shown us that he loves us with an everlasting love. His favor was absolutely unmerited, for it was granted to us while we were yet sinners.'

Lesson Prayer, 'O Lord, help us to see the sinfulness of sin and the pardoning grace of God in the atonement of Jesus Christ on the cross; grant to give us the faith that brings the life of God into our souls by the atonement of Jesus for us.'

BOOK REVIEW

"A Way of Life," William Osler, Oxford University Press, American Branch, New York. Is an address delivered to the Yale students and points out the lines of thought and action which enter into the walk with God as the Way of Life.

THE BLESSING IN A STRUGGLE

"Father," said a young man, "there seems a gross inconsistency with the inequalities of life and the theory of an overruling Providence. It seems mockery that all men are created equal or that God gives to every man according to his ability. The men with ability are required to work hard while others waste what would be a God-send to poor men."

"I do not pretend to explain," said the father, "but I am more impressed with the hardship of those that labor than with the waste of the profligate."

"But you do not quite understand what I mean. It is hard to have to struggle so for what other men receive without asking and waste it when they get it."

"They waste it largely because they got it without an effort," replied the father. "Your way seems hard, and so it is—so hard that you sometimes doubt the goodness of God but you will later see the hand of a kind Providence."

"Learn a lesson from the moth; it is said that if the moth is helped in its struggle to get out of the cocoon, that having failed to exert the necessary activity in pressing its way through the small opening, its wings will be weak and defective—exercise presses the juices into its wings. The struggle was meant to be the moth's salvation."

"Good night, father, I see the point."—D. Carl Yoder.

WHAT ARE THE REQUISITES FOR A WELL-EQUIPPED BEGGINNERS' ROOM?

The requisites are as follows:—kindergarten chairs; a rug or runs for the floor; low tables for hand-work, drawing and building; a sand tray as large as consistent with the size and convenience of the room; a blackboard or the for the children; or better still, blackboards on the walls within reach of the children; blocks for building; pictures and loose leaf picture books; scissors; vases and bowls for flowers; a few jugs and a watering can; a dust pan and brush; a department register; a good piano; a cupboard low enough for the children to reach every shelf.

WHAT ARE SOME OF THE ESSENTIALS OF A SUCCESSFUL INTERMEDIATE SUPERINTENDENT IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL?

Since religion is caught as well as taught, the Intermediate Superintendent must be more than a teacher. Religion cannot be separated from life—physical, mental, social and religious life. Religion is not acquired by memorizing Bible verses. The one who endeavors to bring religious teaching to the boy and girl must know something of their weekly pursuits, their interests and hobbies and their temptations. Otherwise he will make little contact with their needs and his teaching will be abstract, something apart from their lives.

Dr. Wilfred T. Greffell, famous for his humanitarian service in Labrador for the past thirty years has recently been honored by being chosen the fifth Honorary Knight of the Loyal Knights of the Round Table, a distinction conferred only upon men contributing unusually meritorious service to humanity. The other four men upon whom this honor has been bestowed are Thomas A. Edison, Charles E. Hughes, Dr. Andrew Millikan and the late Luther Burbank.

According to Dr. H. K. Carroll's report on the annual church census, churches of America showed a net gain last year of approximately $4,000 over 1926; a net loss of 137 is reported in the number of ministers and 147 fewer churches than last year. This feature of the survey would indicate that the process of consolidation is assuming larger and larger proportions.

Next year the Reformed Church of America will celebrate its 300th anniversary. This church is the oldest body governed by presbytery in the western hemisphere.

NEGLECTING THE CHURCH

The fact that a great many do not attend church service might be interpreted as meaning one can find God without the aid of the Bible or church or minister.

A traveler approaching a bridge over a stream might swim across the river rather than cross the bridge but he is not so foolish.

"Christ is the way, the truth, the life. No man cometh to the Father but by Him." How foolish to seek God in some other way! Why not accept the invitation and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

NEGLECTING THE CHURCH

The fact that a great many do not attend church service might be interpreted as meaning one can find God without the aid of the Bible or church or minister.

A traveler approaching a bridge over a stream might swim across the river rather than cross the bridge but he is not so foolish.

"Christ is the way, the truth, the life. No man cometh to the Father but by Him." How foolish to seek God in some other way! Why not accept the invitation and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

DIRTY DOZEN FROLIC PLEASES FIRST NIGHT CROWD THURSDAY

Eye and ear entertainment that is pleasing to the eye and not half bad to the ear is furnished in abundance in the "Dirty Dozen Frolic of '28," presented at City Hall Theater under auspices of the Dirty Dozen Thursday night.

It actually is a smart revue, rehearsed and staged under the direction of Glenn Paxson, Wilmington, former Xenian.

The music and lyrics are fine, the choruses work with enthusiasm, the costumes are adequate and all members of the cast do their part to put the edition over with a bang.

The emphasis is heavy on the comedy throughout.

The closing scene of the revue, which burlesques "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," overwhelms every other skit and rings the bell with the audience.

That last-named bit is the most outstanding thing in the show.

Archie Maxwell, a comedian with a style all his own, made a distinctive hit as Dan McGrew. Mildred Mason is the "Lady known as Lou," Arthur Hyman has the role of "Jim," William Horner is "The Duke," Bob Downing, "His Pal," Charles McDonald is the "Bar Tender," while the girls in the chorus furnish atmosphere.

The last of the scene consists of a quarrel between Dan and Lou and Jim's return. Following is the final shooting of Dan McGrew and his death at all of which is extremely amusing.

Vocal numbers in this scene include a selection by Mrs. Jean Paxson, labeled as the bar room singer, and "The Lady by the Name of Lou," by Mildred Mason. The first scene of the second act is entitled "Pete and Skeet," the drunken gobs. It includes Archie Maxwell as "Pete" and William Horner as "Skeet." Bill, it may be said, runs through the show like a theme song in a musical comedy and when things begin to lag he can be counted upon to make his appearance most effectively.

The boys have a clever performance although somewhat too long and introduce a little close harmony after a line of patter.

The opening scene of the first act is laid in the banquet hall of the Dirty Dozen Club. The opening chorus is "Bohemia," by the ensemble. The featured soloists are Dorothy DeVoe, Bob Downing and Dora Hayward, each of whom displays a good voice.

The so-called "Glorified American Girl Chorus" is composed of Mary Louise Smith, Helen Spahr, Helen Hill, Esther Ford, Rachel Douthett, Dora Hayward and Dorothy DeVoe. The banquet guests are Roger Chambliss, John Flomert, Edward Higgins, Theodore Jack, Robert Griffith, William North, William Horner, Charles McDonald, H. E. Schmidt, John Pugh, Charles Wood, Donald Chambliss, Bob Downing and Archie Maxwell.

"It All Belongs to Me," sung by Bob Downing and girls, is probably the best number in the scene.

The second scene has a nice theme, Bob Downing is "the man," Glenn Paxson, the "new boy." It ends with Paxson singing "Baby Your Mother," and Dora Hayward and girls giving "Always Look for the Silver Lining." Paxson has an extraordinarily good voice.

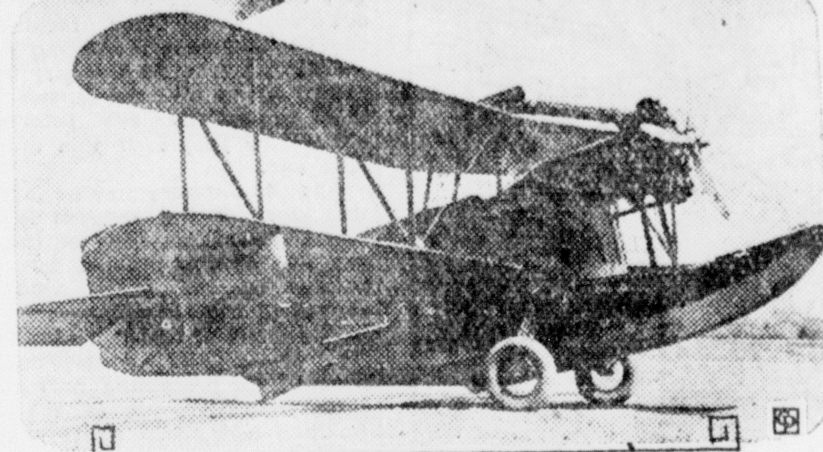

"The Battle of Hearts" is the title of the third scene. Dorothy DeVoe as "Mary" and Roger Chambliss as "Jack" give a cute dialogue after which they sing "Kiss and Make Up" assisted by the girls chorus.

"Sleepy Head" is sung by Dora Hayward, assisted by the girls and this bit is well conceived. The song "Mother" is revived in the fourth and last scene of the first act by William Horner, with Dorothy Hamlin enacting the role of Mother. "Auld Lang Syne" by the ensemble closes the act.

The second act has been discussed and the revue ends with the grand finale, "End of the Make-Believe," by the entire cast. The show is well worth seeing and will be repeated Friday night.

MAY FLY HIGH FOR FRIEND AL

A real whirlwind campaign may be conducted by Lieutenant Governor Edwin Corning, left, chairman of the New York state Democratic committee, on behalf of Governor Alfred E. Smith, if Smith wins the Democratic presidential nomination. Corning has just purchased a $24,000 amphibian plane, shown below, to hop back and forth between New York City and his summer home at Northeast Harbor, Me. On the right is his pilot, Havens.

Class Championship Race, B. J. Leveck, Xenia, shooting in Class A, turned in a score of 140, placing him up near the leaders. Shooting in Class C, H. A. Blair, Springfield, shot 135 and J. E. Funk, Xenia, 130. In Class B, R. C. Ritenour, Cedarville, shot 130. In the Ohio State Doubles Championship Race, 100 targets, Leveck was high among the local gunners with a score of 86. Blair cracked 73 and Ritenour scored 66.

Shiny new models in Hudson and Essex automobiles drew crowds to the N. N. Hunter agency show rooms, W. Second St., at the opening of the three-day auto show Thursday.

H. E. Prince, Xenia agency manager, arranged the show in co-operation with the district distributor for Hudson and Essex and a majority of the closed models of both cars were on display. The show rooms were decorated for the affair, music was provided

Bath Twp., Greene Co., Ohio, June 7th, 1928.
Editor, Gazette—
TO THE TAXPAYERS OF GREENE COUNTY
We believe it is time that the tax payers of Greene County should know of a project that is being promoted at their expense. A project that will cost the county upwards of $250,000, and benefit a few real estate dealers only. A few real estate dealers of Osborn, Ohio, and a corporation, foreign to this county, known as The International Development Co., are working and have been working on the commissioners of the county for the Xenia and Fairfield Pike, for the benefit of the same community. A road that is estimated will cost $165,000. Yet after all this, a few persons who are deeply interested in a real estate deal, ask the same commission to establish a road that is estimated will cost $250,000. All this at the expense of the county and the abutting property owners. A road that is absolutely not a necessity. A road that will not benefit the community. A road that more than half of it lies along the plat of this International Development Co. A road that if allowed will place the treasury of the county in such a position that other parts of the county will suffer for the next ten years. We feel that it would be a matter of extreme presumption, for the people of Bath Township to ask the commissioners for more. We are indeed mystified that this project has been countenanced at all. These promoters surely must have taken St. John 12-24, for their text: "Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." If you as tax payers are interested in your part of the county, especially regarding roads, it is time that you make your interest felt. You know best how this can be done.

Committee.

AUTOMATIC SIGNAL SYSTEM WILL TAKE PLACE OF BLOCKS

Authority for the installation of a new type of signals between Xenia and Columbus has been granted by the Pennsylvania Railroad Board of Directors, according to an announcement in the June issue of The Pennsylvania News. The article says:
"Automatic signals, to replace the manual block system between Columbus and Xenia, O., on the Cincinnati Division, have been authorized by the Pennsylvania Railroad Board of Directors. The estimated cost will be approximately $275,000.
"This project covers the installation of automatic signals between these two important points, which will permit closer spacing of all trains, expedite the handling of passenger trains, increase track capacity and materially improve freight train movement.
"This improvement also should enable the Cincinnati Division forces to increase the gross ton miles per train hour.
"Much of the material for this new signal work has been ordered, plans are being made and some of the work has been started in the territory to be improved.
"The Cincinnati Division line to be equipped with the new automatic signals is a 52.2-mile section of double track."

RESTLESS LOVE
© By Samuel Merwin 1928
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Can a girl succeed in the big city without paying the price? Can a girl win success in business without sacrificing her ideals—her soul? Is the modern working girl as moral and true as the girl in the home? Certainly the answers to these questions are interesting enough to people of this modernistic age.

And the answers may be found in the story of the restless love of two girls—sisters—one of the city and one of the village. But it is chiefly of the sister who had drifted to the big city.

The scene of this story is the village of Ackland Center, nestling beneath its protecting garment of elms, breathing yet of the past. Ackland was proud of its past, its traditions and beauty. But the modern world was fast crowding on its peace. A notorious roadhouse, Jazzland, was opened up by a gang. Liquor flowed. Girls of the town were lured there. Young Ham Pew, editor of the weekly newspaper, "The Age," was starting to fight this new menace. He was due for the biggest fight of his life.

Stella Bagot had gone to college and then to New York to follow a writing career. Her young sister, Martha, was kept at home. Martha's mother said: "The home is the safest place for a girl." That afternoon two collegiate looking young men, driving a high-powered roadster, had stopped at the roadside stand of the Bagots and made a date for that night with Martha and her chum, Kitty Pew.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER III

Martha busied herself about the stand. Just as well not to go back to the house with this fire in her cheeks. When she did go, she was demure again. She said, "How do you do, Mrs. Shirlaw." Then, "That was a funny one. Mother. Two men. They bought all the berries. I'll put some more out." With which she tossed the bank note on the tea table and went into the house.

Half an hour later she put down her novel. She couldn't read. Those boys had stolen her mood. Their breezy, care-free manners were appealing. And their humor. Their speech was good. Nice people, evidently. Just full of fun. And she thought about the green car. The motor ran so smoothly you could hardly hear it. What fun it would be to roll secretly, luxuriously through the moonlight. Swiftly. Ride far. Rather different from the Ford.

She sat, coloring again, a slim finger pressed against prettily curved lips. Her eyes strayed toward the front windows. Abruptly then, but quietly, she laid the book on the table and slipped out into the hall. The telephone was in the coat closet under the stairs. If you shut yourself in there, and spoke guardedly, you couldn't be heard on the porch.

She called the Pews. Kitty answered. Martha giggled before she spoke. And she could feel that fire coming into her cheeks, there in the dark. "Listen, Kit," she said. "Do anything tonight?" "Not a thing. Why?" "I'll tell you. It's funny. I had sort of a pick-up just now. At the stand. Two students. Awfully attractive. And a wonderful car. They want to take us for a ride. Another giggle. "It's a regular blind date. How's your courage?" "Courage? If an eskimo invited me into his igloo I'd jump at it. I'm simply bored to death. This is the slowest town."

"Then listen! Tell me what. You call up pretty soon and ask me over to dinner." "Great! And I'll tell Aunt Emma I'm going over with you." Kitty was giggling, too. "It's risky, but shuck! You've got to take chances if you're to have any fun at all." "We'll pick up a hot dog or something to eat. I'll go now. You call back."

It was not their first subterfuge of this sort. The Bagots looked up to the Pews, but seldom met Kitty's aunt socially. To both these high-spirited girls it appeared as a device for occasional escapes into the bright world of adventure.

"Martha!" called Harriet, from the porch. "Telephone!" "Yes, mother." A moment later the girl appeared in the doorway. "It's Kitty Pew. Mother. I think she wants me to come over to dinner. Do you want to talk with her?" "Why, yes." Harriet hurried within. On her return she remarked to Hilda, "That was nice of the child. Martha doesn't have too many good times. I have to recognize that." She sighed. "But my, what a job it is to keep a lively youngster organized!"

At eight-twenty that evening the two girls were walking discreetly along the side road, in the dusk, under the elms. The green car appeared.

She sat, a slim finger pressed against prettily curved lips.

peared; stopped. The blonde young man named Jim opened the door with a merry grin and a "Great stuff! George was a pessimist. Said you'd never be here. But I've told him all along that he could trust those blue eyes. Hop in."

"This is my friend," said Martha, with an outer air of calm. "Her name's Kitty."

"And what's yours?" "Well, Martha."

"Honest?" "Yes," said Kitty, looking straight at them, taking them in. "Those are our real names."

"Great stuff! And we're really George and Jim. You and George can have the back seat, Kitty. Or as much of it as you want. See in with me, Martha. Well, boys and girls, we're off!"

On this same Friday evening, rather late, the Pew brothers, Homer and Homer, sat in their shirt sleeves at their desks in the front office of the Age. The weekly rush was over. All the late matter was in type, and the proofs corrected. Miss Curry had said good-night and gone home. The big press was rumbling, launched on its all-night task. Ben March, the foreman, appeared, sleeves rolled up around his arm-garters, green eye-shade pushed up into his stubby red hair, and laid a damp copy of the new issue on each desk. And each of the brothers settled back in his swivel chair to look it carefully through.

Ham Pew appeared much as his father must have appeared at thirty-four—long, bony; a shrewd, rather wrinkly face with plenty of nose and chin. Like Ben March, he wore an eye shade. And he was smoking an old curved pipe.

Homer was tall, too, but more shapely. His brown hair curled a little in spite of much stern brushing back. The eyes were hazel, clear frank eyes, set well apart. The forehead square and not too high. An attractive young man, with considerably more than the average distinction. A pleasant but thoughtful face. He was the younger by nine years.

Both, without speaking, and after a cursory glance at the front-page headlines, turned to the editorial; because he had written it. Homer because it disturbed him. For the past six weeks, by Ham's orders, a running head had been used on the editorial—"Ackland's Sore Spot."

Homer looked the column over; considered it; spoke, in a casual tone. "How long are you going to keep this editorial head, Ham?" The older man straightened slightly in his chair; removed his pipe and knocked out the ashes; reached for a steel letter opener, and thoughtfully scraped the bowl. Then he looked out through the wide front window at the Village Green. He could see the Civil War monument, a plain shaft of granite, and beyond it the big white tablet bearing the names of the boys from Ackland who had served in the World War. It was illuminated by spotlights. His own name was there. And there were eleven gold stars.

"I'm going to keep that head," he said, very quietly. "Ham was always quiet." "Until we've run that damned roadhouse gang out of town."

Both resumed their inspection of the paper. The telephone rang. Homer answered. "Homer Pew speaking. What do you want to say to him?" He slammed the receiver on its hook. "That's a new one, Ham."

"A threat."

"So."

"A man. I don't know the voice. A regular rough guy. He said, 'Tell that damn fool brother of yours that if he don't lay off Jazzland, and do it quick, we'll get him. And we'll get him good!'"

Ham deliberately filled his pipe. "I'm surprised. It's quite in character."

heard within the office but the rustling of one or another of the papers. Homer got out his own pipe; rather absently filled and lit it. Outside an occasional automobile rushed by. Trucks rumbled past, laden with farm produce for the early Boston markets. The clock in the Unitarian church struck twelve.

Homer tossed his paper aside. "Everything seems to be all right, Ham. How about starting along home?"

The older brother didn't rise; but pulled out a drawer of his desk; leaned back and put up his feet. His brows were drawn thoughtfully down.

"We don't seem to see this local row quite eye to eye, do we, Homer?"

The younger man hesitated. They weren't given to conversation. Least of all, to raising issues. This was serious. He cleared a corner of Ham's desk and sat there. "No," he remarked. "No, we don't seem to, quite."

"Hm!" Ham smoked and thought.

Bath Twp., Greene Co., Ohio, June 7th, 1928.

TO THE TAX PAYERS OF GREENE COUNTY.

We believe it is time that the tax payers of Greene County should know of a project that is being promoted at their expense. A project that will cost the county upwards of $250,000, and benefit a few real estate dealers only. A few real estate dealers of Xenia, Ohio, and a corporation, foreign to this county, known as The International Development Co., are working and have been working on the commission of the county for the past year or two, for the establishment of a road, that will be to their advantage alone. The people of Bath Township, and especially the people of Xenia, should be very grateful to the County Commissioners for what they have done for them. They have loaned the use of the county road machinery for putting a tarvia street through the main part of Xenia. They have fixed and tarried Xenia Drive through the town for one half mile. RESTLESS LOVE

© By Samuel Merwin 1928
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Can a girl succeed in the big city without paying the price? Can a girl win success in business without sacrificing her ideals—her soul? Is the modern working girl as moral and true as the girl in the home? Certainly the answers to these questions are interesting enough to people of this modernistic age.

And the answers may be found in this story of the restless love of two girls—sisters—one of the city and one of the village. But it is chiefly of the sister who has drifted to the big city.

The scene of this story is the village of Ackland Center, nestled beneath its protecting garment of elms, breathing yet of the past. Ackland was proud of its past, its traditions and beauty. But the modern era was fast crowding on its peace. A notorious roadhouse, Jazzland, was opened up by a gang-liquor flowed. Girls of the town were lured there. Young Ham Pew, editor of the weekly newspaper, "The Age," was starting to fight this new menace. He was due for the biggest fight of his life.

Stella Bagot had gone to college and then to New York to follow a writing career. Her young sister, Martha, was kept at home. Martha's mother said: "The home is the safest place for a girl." That afternoon two collegiate looking young men, driving a high-powered roadster, had stopped at the roadside stand of the Bagots and made a date for that night with Martha and her chum, Kitty Pew.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER III

Martha bustled herself about the stand. Just as well not to go back to the house with this fire in her cheeks. When she did go, she was demure again. She said, "How do you do, Mrs. Shirlaw." Then, "That was a funny one, Mother. Two men. They bought all the berries. I'll put some more out." With which she tossed the bank note on the tea table and went into the house.

Half an hour later she put down her novel. She couldn't read. Those boys had stolen her mood. Their breezy, care-free manners were appealing. And their humor. Their speech was good. Nice people, evidently. Just full of fun. And she thought about the green car. The motor ran so smoothly you could hardly hear it. What fun it would be to roll secretly, luxuriously through the moonlight. Swiftly. Ride far. Rather different from the Ford.

She sat, coloring again, a slim finger pressed against her lips. She looked at the green car. The motor ran so smoothly you could hardly hear it. What fun it would be to roll secretly, luxuriously through the moonlight. Swiftly. Ride far. Rather different from the Ford.

Ten other persons, including seven firemen, were injured by the blast which followed a fire of undetermined origin.

One of the blast victims, Theodore Lodiginski, film director and former general in the Russian army, was reported in a critical condition.

Besides Chaplin those who were warned in time to escape injury included the Marquis De La Falais, husband of Gloria Swanson; Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor; John McCormick, his wife, Colleen Moore, and Renee Adoree.

"SCARFACE" AL CAPONE BECOMES CZAR OF CHICAGO DYEING AND CLEANING

By FRANCIS F. HEALY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, June 8.—First it was a saloon, in the pre-prohibition days; then a gambling house; then vice resorts; then head of the largest liquor, vice and gambling syndicate ever operated in the United States; then managing dog race tracks; and now the cleaning and dyeing business.

That's "Scarface Al" Alphonse Capone, Chicago's self-styled "up-lifter" of men's weaknesses.

With Mr. Capone in his new enterprise are his trusty consorts, Jackie Cusick, alias Gusik, and alias other things; Maurice Cowen, who enjoys the reputation of being the brother of Louis Cowen, publisher of the Cicero Tribune, and others.

The story begins with Morris Becker, who for forty-two years has conducted a number of cleaning and pressing shops in Chicago of the better kind. Becker found he could press a man's three-piece suit for $1.25 and still keep the wolf from the door and that by charging ninety $1.50 he could put knife-pleats in her dress.

Union Demands

Then along came the Master Cleaners and Dyers Association. The association formed a union of this and a union of that until it demanded $1.75 for the pants pressing business and $2.25 to make it ready presentable.

The new union refused to allow its workers to perform for Becker. Becker thus found himself "out." The cleaner said he wrote a letter to the State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe outlining the situation but failed to receive a reply.

"They tried to shake me down for $5,000 to join the new union and I told them I could only pay $3,000," Becker complained. They then agreed to accept that as a down payment. That developed trouble. I am getting old. I'm too old to start out and fight like a young cub, so I sold my business.

But Becker only told half the story.

In April the Sanitary Cleaning Shops, Inc. came into existence and incorporation papers were taken out. Incorporators were shown as Alphonse Capone, John Gusik and Maurice Cowen, our old friends.

A central plant was started in the neighborhood where a bomb manufacturing plant was reported to be operating several months ago. One hundred branch shops are to be placed in Chicago, with delivery service and rates similar to those urged by Becker.

C. L. Hostetter, secretary of the Employers' Association now tells the story:

"Becker told Crowe he couldn't operate. Crowe ignored him. Becker, having no recourse to law and order to operate his business, went to the only power in Chicago that is universally recognized.

BURNING COAL MINE INTERESTS MANY AS ONLY OHIO VOLCANO

SHAWNEE, O., June 8.—Although thousands have made trips here to see Ohio's only live volcano, few, if any, have the slightest idea what it is all about.

Thirty-five years ago a vein of coal under the Perry County hills caught fire, and since that time has devoured its way through miles of valuable mineral deposits, resisting all efforts to extinguish it. Smoke constantly sifts up through fissures in the earth's surface from the smoldering coal below, threatening homes, roads and lands. It caused a part of a village to be moved, and has been the source of worry to hundreds living in the vicinity.

Even some residents of this village, with the mine in their front yard, so to speak, have never taken the trouble to ask the where and why. To them it is a fact, and an every day sight that they tire of seeing. To them there is nothing wonderful or unusual about the sight.

The mine fire started in 1893 in a mine then owned by the Jones Coal company. It spread to the mine here and has remained burning, eating into a rich coal vein and causing incalculable loss.

Smoke is forever emitting from this mine, seeping up out of fissures in the ground, sometimes forcing its own way to the air, to ever remind you that beneath the surface of the earth there is a blaze smoldering ever ready to break forth in red tongues of flame when fed by a draft of air.

On clear days the smoke is plainly visible, but on rainy days when the atmosphere is heavy, it hangs low over the ground as a mist does at sea on a warm night.

Each "old-timer" in this section tell a different story of how the fire started, stories that are as un-consumed approximately seven miles of a valuable coal vein. All have proven futile. The mine was flooded several times. A concrete casement was sunk deep into the earth in the path of the fire. Sealing off the entrances so as no air could reach the blaze was also tried, but all to no account.

One section of this town was moved because of the threatening danger that the fire would undermine it. Many houses have been undermined and destroyed.

One interesting freak of the fire is pointed out, almost proudly, by the residents here. It is that of a house entirely surrounded by the trail of the fire. The residents say that at one time a literal smoke screen enveloped the house. The reason they say, is because the foundation is on solid rock and the coal vein detours, so to speak, around the house.

"SCARFACE" AL CAPONE BECOMES CZAR OF CHICAGO DYEING AND CLEANING

By FRANCIS F. HEALY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, June 8.—First it was a saloon, in the first prohibition days; then a gambling house; then vice resorts; then head of the largest liquor, vice and gambling syndicate ever operated in the United States; then managing dog race tracks; and now the cleaning and dyeing business.

That "Scarface Al" Alphonse Capone, Chicago's self-styled "up-lifter" of men's weaknesses.

With Mr. Capone in his new enterprise are his trusted associates Jackie Cusick, alias Gusik, and as other things; Maurice Cowen, who enjoys the reputation of being the brother of Louis Cowen, publisher of the Clevo Tribune, and others.

The story begins with Morris Becker, who for forty-two years has conducted a number of cleaning and pressing shops in Chicago of the better kind. Becker found he could press a man's three-piece suit for $1.25 and still keep ten wolf from the door and that by charging mildly $1.50 he could put knife-plots in her dress.

Union Demands

Then along came the Master Cleaners and Dyers Association. The association formed a union of this and a union of that until it demanded $1.75 for the pants pressing business and $2.25 to make it ready presentable.

The new union refused to allow its workers to perform for Becker. Becker thus found himself "out."

The cleaner said he wrote a letter to the State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe outlining the situation but failed to receive a reply.

"They tried to shake me down for $5,000 to join the new union and I told them I could only pay $2,000," Becker complained. "They then agreed to accept that as a down payment. That developed trouble, I am getting old, I'm too old to start out and fight like a young cub, so I sold my business."

Mr. Becker only told half the story.

In April the Sanitary Cleaning Shops, Inc. came into existence and incorporation papers were taken out. Incorporators were shown as Alphonse Capone, John Gusik and Maurice Cowen, our old friends.

A central plant was started in the neighborhood where a bomb manufacturing plant was reported to be operating several months ago. One hundred branch shops are to be placed in Chicago, with delivery service and rates similar to those urged by Becker.

C. L. Hostetter, secretary of the Employers' Association now tells the story.

"Becker told Crowe he couldn't operate. Crowe ignored him. Becker having no recourse to law and order to operate his business went to the only power in Chicago that is universally recognized."

ing, eating into a rich coal vein like as day and night. Some tell of a feud between a mine boss and a laborer. Others say it was due to an explosion. A few say that it was due to spontaneous combustion. The last is the most satisfactory explanation of the fire, mine engineers say.

"The main highway through here, the Logan-New Lexington Road, nearly passes over the mine. A blackened hillside but a hundred or so feet from the road tells its own story, that the fire once burned there leaving in its trail a devastated slope that was once rich with vegetation.

Numerous attempts have been made to smother the fire which has consumed approximately seven miles of a valuable coal vein. All have proven futile. The mine was flooded several times. A concrete casement was sunk deep into the earth in the path of the fire. Steam off the entrances so as no air could reach the blaze was also tried, but all to no account.
